Hitler Cancels Navy Leaves; Bomb Toll 23

Loyalist Raid on Ship Spurs Reich to Action

To Protest to Neutrality Committee; Action With Duce Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin (Monday), May 31. All shore leaves in the German navy were canceled, it was learned early today, following a cabinet decision "to take measures" because of the bombing of the pocket battleship Deutschland by Spanish loyalist airplanes.

Orders canceling the leaves were issued after the news of the Deutschland bombing off the Balearic island of Ibiza had been relayed from ship to ship around the world.

An official announcement early today placed the casualties aboard the warship, which docked at Gibraltar, at 23 dead, 19 seriously wounded and 64 slightly wounded.

(Original accounts of the bombing, emanating from Valencia Saturday, listed no casualties, and gave the name of the ship as the Admiral Scheer. Official sources in Berlin professed Saturday night to have no information of the bombing.)

The cabinet met in a hastily called session in the chancellery yesterday, Reichsfuehrer Hitler and a number of others flying to Berlin for the meeting.

Satisfaction Demanded.

The government, an official communique announced, decided "this new criminal onslaught on a German ship compels the German government to take measures which it will without delay communicate to the nonintervention committee."

A semiofficial communique, issued this morning, raised demands of satisfaction for the bombing of the warship and a guarantee of nonrecurrence of attack.

"The dastardly attack on a German control ship has caused the greatest indignation and deepest mourning in the whole Reich," it said.

"If the Valencia government pretends its planes were fired at by the Deutschland," it continued, "it is lying. Europe will be obliged to defend itself against the irresponsible and warlike maneuvers of Bolshevist murder gangs.

Reich Answered Plea.

"It was not Germany that wanted to take over the sea control (around Spain in supervision of the international ban on the flow of men and munitions to the civil war).

"The powers concerned approached Germany with the request to take a share and Germany, for the sake of peace, shouldered the burden.

"What guarantees can the nonintervention commission offer that such incidents won't recur?

"The blood of German and Italian sailors fallen in the service of the international control demands satisfaction.

"It must not be forgotten that behind Valencia (the Spanish government) stands bolshevism. Ibiza must be the alarm signal to the whole of Europe."

A number of receptions planned on the occasion of the visit of Japanese warships to Germany were transformed into sorrowful gatherings.

Today is the anniversary of the Battle of Jutland, which the Germans always celebrate as an outstanding World War victory. Whether the ceremonies scheduled to be held in Kiel in connection with the anniversary will be can-

Weather Is Ideal For President's Hyde Park Visit

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt arrived here by special train today to spend the Memorial Day holidays at his ancestral home. He found conditions ideal for roughing it and resting in the warm sunshine. It was his first visit to his rambling stone and stucco home on the Hudson since Election Day.

He will stay three days, putting in most of his time inspecting his gardens and newly planted trees, and possibly go for a swim in the outdoor pool at his nearby Val-Kill cottage.

The President found his 82-year-old mother rapidly recovering from a broken ankle suffered a month ago. The two had breakfast and a long chat together soon after the President arrived.

The President later participated in a meeting at his home of the Vestrymen of St. John's Episcopal Church at Hyde Park. The President is senior warden of the church.

Torpedo Sinks Spanish Liner; 50 Aboard Are Reported Dead

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Spain, May 30.—The Spanish liner Ciudad de Barcelona tonight was reported torpedoed and sunk by an insurgent submarine off the coast 37 miles northeast of Barcelona.

[The Catalonian government announced that 50 passengers were drowned and many were injured, the United Press reported.]

The attack reportedly occurred off Malgrat, Spain.

The report said an oil tanker was torpedoed in the same area after the liner had been struck. The tanker was said to have escaped damage.

(Lloyds' register lists the Spanish motorship Ciudad de Barcelona as a vessel 332 feet in length and with a gross tonnage of 3,946. She was built in 1929 and formerly was called the Infante Don Jaime.)

Shells Kill 50 in Madrid.

Madrid, May 30 (AP).—At least 50 persons were killed and 70 wounded early today when insurgent artillery loosed its guns on Madrid in one of the most severe bombardments of the siege.

Several hundred shells were thrown into the city from the insurgent replacements on its western fringe.

Mola Opens New Drive.

Hendaye, France, May 30 (AP).—Insurgent Gen. Emilio Mola opened the sixtieth day of his offensive against Bilbao, Basque capital, today with a heavy attack on Lemona, a strategic highway junction about 10 miles southeast of the city.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London (Monday), May 31.—The bombing of the German battleship Deutschland sent wildfire alarm through Europe's capitals today and delivered a major blow to efforts already under way to abolish foreign intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Diplomats were faced with the ironical fact that the Deutschland was bombed—as she lay at anchor in the rebel-held Balearic Island of Ibiza—in what was a direct outgrowth of international attempts to isolate the Spanish conflict and prevent it from bursting into a general European war.

The Deutschland was sent into Spanish waters, along with warships of Great Britain, France and Italy, to patrol the coastline and prevent foreign aid—men, munitions and supplies—from reaching either the rebels or loyalists.

Germany's announcement that she will take "independent measures" against the loyalists, who admitted that two of their planes dumped bombs on the Deutschland, caused alarm among envoys of 26 other nations represented on the nonintervention committee.

Reich Withdrawal Doubted.

Most observers doubted that Germany would immediately renounce her nonintervention pledge and withdraw from the committee, but it was believed she might demand stern sanctions against the loyalists.

A demand for sanctions and punishment of the Valencia government undoubtedly would split the neutrality body wide apart—cleaving it into ominous divisions between the Fascists on one side and the Leftist and democratic powers on the other.

The situation — admittedly the worst of any of the many international complication growing out of Spain's "little world war"—was aggravated by the angry temper of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Fascist ally, Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy.

Mussolini, more insistent than Hitler upon a rebel victory in Spain and more warlike in his defiance of other powers, on Saturday told

Wide Amnesty Bill Passed by Cuban House

Would Virtually Empty All Jails; Upper Chamber Opposition Waited.

By the United Press.

Havana, May 30.—One of the most sweeping acts of amnesty legislation in modern history was adopted today by the lower house of the Cuban Congress.

Thousands of prisoners and persons awaiting trial for all classes of common and political crimes committed before May 20, 1937, would be freed under its provisions.

Certain crimes of terrorism and kidnaping are not pardoned. However, the legislation would result in virtual emptying of Cuban jails and would relieve the jammed dockets of Cuban courts.

The bill provides full amnesty for exiled former President Gerardo Machado and at least 40 others who served in his cabinet; police officials jailed or awaiting trial for crimes ranging from murder downward would be freed. Death sentences and terms of life imprisonment presently held in abeyance, for both political and common crimes, would be commuted.

Full amnesty would be provided for members of revolutionary groups who participated in the general strike of 1935; pardons would be granted for all social and political crimes and offenses such as strikes, sabotage, illicit association, conspiracy.

The bill now goes to the Senate where it is believed it will encounter strong opposition. Many Senators have already expressed disapproval of the wide scope of the measure which they say "dumps criminals back on society." Other Senators fear that pardoning of Machadists, many of whom were given death sentences several times for killing anti-Machado revolutionaries, may cause dangerous public reaction.

17 Britons Perish In Air in 2 Days

London, May 30 (AP).—Authorities began an investigation tonight of one of the most disastrous weekends in British aviation history—a period in which 17 persons were killed. The fatalities marred celebration Saturday of Empire Air Day.

Three Local Residents Killed, 12 Injured in Holiday Crashes

Traffic crashes in and near the city yesterday took the lives of two men and injured 12 other persons.

A Washington woman, Miss Ona Singles, 40, of 1632 Newton street northwest, was killed near York Pa., when she fell from the open door of a car operated by Miss Elva Pennington, of Chester, Pa., the Associated Press reported.

Nicolo Natoli, 49, 1356 Florida avenue northeast, died almost instantly when a blowout caused the automobile he was driving to overturn several times on the Davidsonville road about 15 miles from Annapolis.

He was returning from Annapolis with his wife, Josephine, when the accident occurred. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Annapolis Hospital. Mrs. Natoli was treated for cuts and shock and allowed to return to her home.

A grocer, Natoli is survived by his wife, five daughters and a son.

The second victim was Carl Lesney, 55, of Merryfield, Va., who died a short time after he was admitted to Georgetown Hospital following a head-on collision between his automobile and a bus on the Lee highway, 4 miles west of Falls Church.

Two pedestrians were struck by hit-and-run drivers in Prince Georges County.

G. F. Baker Dies on Ship; Wife at Side

Operation, Transfusions Futile After Race Across Pacific.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, May 30.—George F. Baker, 59, reputedly one of the Nation's wealthiest men, died today aboard his big yacht, Viking, in Honolulu Harbor, a peritonitis victim despite far-flung efforts by air and sea to save his life.

Baker, chairman of the First National Bank of New York, succumbed at 6:15 a. m. (11:45 a. m. Eastern standard time) after physicians and nurses had worked fruitlessly throughout the night, watching his condition become progressively worse.

At least one blood transfusion was given and oxygen was reported used.

Death won the battle despite the combined efforts of three Government agencies, an ocean liner, a 300-mile race into port with the stricken financier and a 5,500-mile air dash by Mrs. Baker from New York to Honolulu.

Associates said that despite his condition he exhibited annoyance when he learned yesterday of the notice given to his illness and the strenuous efforts in his behalf.

Mr. Baker became ill last Tuesday as the yacht, with a party of friends, was heading toward Honolulu from the Fiji Islands.

Seeking medical assistance, the yachting party hailed the Canadian liner Niagara as it passed. Dr. John A. Newell, 70-year-old Australian specialist, a Niagara passenger, volunteered to assist and with an English nurse boarded the Viking in midocean.

Immediately Dr. Alfred S. Ambler, Baker's personal physician and a member of the yachting party, performed the operation, assisted by Dr. Newell and the nurse.

The Niagara resumed her course and the Viking put on full steam for Honolulu. A few hours later the yacht sent a call for medical assistance.

Coast Guardsmen converted their cutter Taney into a hospital ship, picked up Dr. D. J. Zaugg, of the Public Health Service, and three nurses and sped out of Honolulu to the rescue. An hour later a naval plane collected serums which Dr. Zaugg had not time to gather, overtook the cutter and dropped them. The Taney picked them up and sped on.

Dr. Zaugg and the nurses boarded the Viking, Mrs. Baker left New York by airplane for Honolulu. The yacht sailed into port Friday morning, arriving a few hours ahead of

Half-Lump Plenty For Wallis' Tea, Aunt Bessie Says

Monts, France, May 30 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield, their wedding only four days off, spent a quiet "family Sunday" today.

Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Warfield's "Aunt Bessie," from Washington, watched over her niece's now famous trim figure when the trio sat down to tea at their Touraine retreat. She put only half a lump of sugar in Mrs. Warfield's cup, gave the duke a whole lump and took two for herself.

They had both lunch and tea in the garden, and were served by three butlers wearing new uniforms with brass buttons and yellow stripes against a dark background.

New Britain Isle Rocked by Quake

Port Moresby, British New Guinea (Monday), May 31 (AP).—Wireless dispatches received here today said serious volcanic eruptions and earth shocks have led to the evacuation of nearly all the population of Rabaul, on the Pacific Island of New Britain. Terrified natives as well as white residents were taken from the port.

The Australian naval surveying vessel Moresby reported she was on her way to Rabaul carrying food and medicines. Two other vessels were standing off the coast to render assistance.

7 Berry-Pickers Burned to Death

Crisfield, Md., May 30 (AP).—Fire in a strawberry pickers' shanty near Marion Station last night or early today burned to death 7 colored persons, making a total of 11 who have lost their life in this manner within a week. The fire claiming 7 lives came while Sheriff William H. Dryden was running down clews that led them to believe, they said, that a similar fire Thursday, fatal to 4, was of incendiary origin.

Chicago, May 30.—Four persons were dead tonight and 88 injured following a clash between police and demonstrators at the plant of the Republic Steel Corporation in South Chicago. Twenty-three of the injured were policemen.

The riot started this afternoon when strike sympathizers, estimated by onlookers at about 1,500, met police in a field two blocks from the Republic plant, which has continued to operate despite a strike call of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Armed with clubs and rocks, the demonstrators marched toward the plant following a mass meeting several blocks away.

Two hundred policemen, headed by Supervising Capt. James L. Mooney, ordered the crowd to halt, tried to argue with them and then began to swing riot clubs when it appeared the mob was determined to carry its march to the factory gates.

Sympathizers pelted the police with rocks and bricks. Several officers fell hurt. Five patrol wagons rushed to the scene, charged the crowd but failed to force it to retreat.

Police drew their pistols. They fired several shots into the air as a warning. Then, said Capt. Mooney, some of the sympathizers pulled pistols and began to shoot.

Capt. Mooney ordered his men to fire in the direction of the crowd. Some of the officers used pistols loaded with bullets. Others used tear gas guns. Several strikers toppled over before the rioters turned and ran.

Rush Bodies to Hospital.

Patrol wagons picked up bodies of dead and injured and rushed them to nearby hospitals, while the policemen continued their rout of the strikers for two blocks across the field.

While the rioting went on employes in the plant stood at windows and watched the fracas. Their wives and sweethearts, who had been permitted inside the gates, scurried to the side of the plant for shelter.

Capt. Mooney said police were warned this morning the marchers probably would attempt another attack on the plant, their fourth in five days, and, consequently, had called a large number of officers to the scene. Plant guards also had been reinforced.

In all four marches on the plant, in which numerous women have participated, the sympathizers have been repulsed, and more than 20 have been injured in previous brushes with the police.

At the mass meeting preceding the demonstration today union leaders praised John L. Lewis' C. I. O., of which the S. W. O. C. is an affiliate. They urged the strikers to "hold out," and protested "brutal police attacks on peaceful picketing."

Used Clubs, Razors.

Capt. John Prendergast, of Chicago's uniformed police, said tonight "about 1,500 strikers marched in a body on the plant today. Capt. James P. Mooney was in charge of 200 men at the entrance. He ordered the crowd to disperse. A shot came from the crowd and that started the melee. The strikers were armed with clubs, gear shift bars, razors and other instruments. One policeman had his coat sleeve slashed off by a razor."

Relief Victory Appears Likely For Roosevelt

Free Hand in Spending May Cost Peace of Party Organization.

By Russell Smith.

President Roosevelt appeared last night to have won a free hand in relief spending but the victory had etched scars in the House organization of his party which may not heal readily.

The key man in the controversy over earmarking of relief funds, Representative Wilburn Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the roads committee, said last night no compromise is possible on his amendment requiring expenditure of $150,000,000 for highways through State road commissions.

"Either we get it or we don't," he summed up the situation preparatory to a meeting of his committee tomorrow to canvass suggestions brought from Mr. Roosevelt Saturday by Floor Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas. Tomorrow, too, the House will renew debate on the $1,500,000,000 bill, when it is expected to dispose of the measure.

Although Representatives Alfred P. Beiter (Democrat), of New York, and Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, indicated previously they intended to support Cartwright if the highway issue comes on the floor tomorrow, it was generally believed the concessions given them had brought the relief revolt to an end.

Cartwright Dissatisfied.

Beiter heads the bloc which sought to tax $300,000,000 for Public Works Administration expenditures. Starnes the group which sought specific authority for a $45,000,000 flood-control expenditure.

"I am not satisfied," Cartwright said last night of the compromise proposals. "We got just about what the little boy shot at—nothing. The only thing the President told us was that road expenditures must go for relief, not for materials.

"There isn't much possibility of compromise on this. We want to spend $75,000,000 for main roads, $75,000,000 for farm-to-market roads and $25,000,000 for eliminating grade-crossings, all through the regular authorized bodies, the State commissions.

"The President and Harry Hopkins want a blank check. If the President gave us what we want, he would lose control of how it would be spent. He wants it spent by county boards. So it looks as if there isn't any way to compromise differences like that."

Questioned as to whether Beiter and Starnes would join with him

6,000 Remember Soldier Dead In Rites at Arlington Cemetery

Pictures on Pages 12 and 13.

The Nation remembered its soldier dead yesterday at Arlington Cemetery, where 44,000 men rest beneath the old trees of Robert E. Lee's plantation. Impressive services at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb and later in the Amphitheater were observed by 6,000 people. The entire program was broadcaht over National radio hookups.

Only a corporal's guard of Lincoln's once mighty army in blue was able to get to the services in yesterday's heat. White and stooped, four old men marched with faltering step to their seats on the crowded rostrum, now filled with veterans of later years.

John M. Kline, 91, proud department commander of the G. A. R., took a full part in the services, calling the gathering to order for the presentation of the colors. John T. Ryan, 91, gaunt guard at the United States Capitol; Eugene Weaver, 95, small and alert, and William Dorsey, 89, the youngest, rounded out the 4 of the Capital's 12 Civil War veterans present.

Yesterday's observance was the main service of the G. A. R. Corporation, a unit representing some hundred organizations in this area. However, another Grand Army of the Republic memorial will take place today, Decoration Day, at Battleground National Cemetery at 3:30 p. m. Today's service will close some 60 Memorial Day observances which started Friday and have taken place at various monuments, graves and cemeteries.

At least 25,000 tourists visited the Capital yesterday for the pre-holiday expression of reverent patriot-

Pilot, Passenger Die In Ala. Plane Crash

Montgomery, Ala., May 30 (U.P.).—A pilot and his 19-year-old passenger were killed instantly today when their monoplane, caught in a sharp downward air current, went out of control and crashed in a vacant lot near the heart of the Montgomery residential district.

Both Russell Luquire, 40, Birmingham, and his passenger, Evelyn Williams, 19, of Montgomery, were dead when horrified eye witnesses reached the wreckage.

Byrd Discloses Power to Ask RA Statistics

Made Demand by Virtue of Senate Committee Leadership.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, disclosed yesterday he had used Senate-granted authority to demand that Secretary Wallace produce official records regarding what the Virginian says is "waste" in resettlement projects in the Shenandoah area of his State.

Byrd, in a letter to Wallace called for copies of contracts and itemized statements of cost. He demanded them by virtue of his powers as chairman of the Senate Reorganization Committee.

He asserted Wallace's estimates that new farm units for the mountain area would not exceed $3,775 per family were in conflict with higher figures submitted by other officials, including Rexford G. Tugwell, former RA head.

Byrd, who has proposed governmental reorganization economies and criticized economy suggestions of the Administration, wrote he acted on the assumption that Wallace was unwilling to investigate "waste and extravagance" in the Shenandoah homestead projects. He requested such an inquiry on May 21.

Asserting he had no desire to "embarrass" the Agriculture Secretary's "efforts to improve the efficiency and reduce the waste and extravagance of the Resettlement Administration," Byrd wrote he had delayed his public criticism for nearly a year.

"I am not opposing sound and practical relief to these worthy mountain families but I oppose this present scheme because it will not be successful in giving the benefits expected," he said.

Last summer, he wrote, "I was appalled upon learning that Dr. Tugwell intended to expend $1,500,000 on a resettlement program for 250 mountain families by means of collective village farming."

Byrd contended Wallace's estimate "does not include any accounting for the costly overhead which has been largely responsible for the extravagant expenditures already made."

D. C. Student Aviator Escapes As Plane Clips Tree, Crashes

He was James Moran, 627 Florence street northeast, son of Park Policeman James A. Moran.

One of the wings of Moran's plane clipped a tree at the edge of the landing field as he was making a landing, and the ship plummeted to the ground. Attendants at the airport said the youthful pilot apparently misjudged his distance.

Moran climbed out of the plane with severe cuts to the head and face and bruises of the body, but physicians at Sibley Hospital, where he was taken after the crash, said his injuries were not serious. The control of the plane was jammed against the young man's chin.

Moran is employed in a downtown department store. His father said his son shared ownership in the plane with a friend and was flying to increase his number of "solo" hours in the air, which now number 26.

Farm Workers Forgotten Men Under Security

Failure to Include Group in Provisions of Act Is Explained.

By the Associated Press.

The farm's hired man and the old cow hand apparently are to look only from afar on the green fields of labor standards and social security.

Laws made and in the making contain no provision for agricultural workers. In fact, they are specifically exempted—as they were exempted under the invalidated NRA.

Economists and sociologists at the Agriculture Department said yesterday there were basic reasons for these exclusions.

There are about 2,000,000 hired workers on the 6,000,000 odd farms in the United States, with porbably an equal number of family workers, relative to the farmer who may or may not pay.

An attempt to establish wage or hour standards for an average of one worker to every three farms, the economists said, would result in administrative costs that would be larger than possible benefit.

They said the traditional long hours of farm work—from daybreak until after dark—and the rush periods of plowing, planting, and harvesting presented a complicated pattern of conditions that could not be fitted to standards.

On top of this, the economists said, the cotton belt, wheat belt, corn belt, sugar beet area, fruit region, livestock ranches, and dairy areas involve varied standards that defy administrative machinery

W. T. Ham, labor expert for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, said Germany encountered an endless series of complications when it attempted to extend government unemployment insurance to farm workers. Sons of farmers went to work for neighbors in order to qualify for benefit, or farm workers refused part-time jobs in nearby towns and cities.

Josiah C. Folsom, another agricultural economist, said no State ever had attempted to fix farm wage standards, except through the indirect method of influencing the law of labor supply and demand by compelling children of school age to attend classes.

He said farm workers were excluded from protection under most States workmen's compensation laws, although farming was a hazardous occupation. Folsom said about 5,000 farm workers were killed and 85,000 injured annually.

Catholic Sisters Kept Miss Adams Secure From Men

New York, May 30 (AP).—Maude Adams, regarded by many as the greatest of all actresses, is moving to the Catskill Mountains tomorrow to carry on her long retreat from the world of men.

Three other elderly women and the white-haired little husband of one of them will live for the next two months with Miss Adams on her 1,200-acre farm, formerly the home of Gen. Custer's widow, at Tannersville, N. Y.

Mitchell Declares For Ramspeck Bill

St. Augustine, Fla., May 30 (AP).—Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, said today that "by and large, the competitive system of entrance into the public service does recruit a more competent lot of people."

That, he said, "is why I think it would be well to have all postmasters under the civil service law, as well as all other positions in the executive civil service that are not policy forming."

Mitchell addressed the joint convention of the Postmaster Association and postal groups of Florida.

"Despite the pessimism that prevailed among many of the friends of the merit system respecting this particular legislation," he said, "the Ramspeck bill, after two years of effort, passed the House three months ago and since then has been resting in the Senate Civil Service Committee, with good prospects of passage when the Senate is given a chance to express itself on the proposition."

Hatch to Demand U. S. Job Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, disclosed yesterday he will demand Senate action tomorrow on a proposal for a top to bottom investigation of unemployment by a special "citizens' commission."

The bill, favorably reported by the Senate Education and Labor Committee, calls for a $50,000 allocation from relief funds to finance an inquiry into the causes and possible remedies of unemployment and into methods of handling relief. The survey would be conducted by a commission of from 5 to 15 prominent citizens selected by the President.

Premature Baby, 'Resurrected,' Dies

Sanford, Me., May 30 (U.P.).—Sanford's baby "Lazarus"—risen from the dead"—died at a late hour tonight.

Born four and one-half months prematurely to Mrs. Fred LaMontaigne at 4 a. m., the child was pronounced dead at birth by Dr. W. H. Kelley.

Eleven hours later, Undertaker Lionel LaFrance arrived to claim the "body" and discovered the child was breathing.

Dr. Kelley was summoned and worked over the child several hours in a fruitless effort to keep it alive.

New Faces in Congress

Rep. Sparkman Praises TVA, Wants Cheap Power for All

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN J. SPARKMAN.

Alabama's Stout Congressman Dreads Summer in Washington; Desires Extension of Soil Conservation, Fertilizer Program.

Stout and serious-faced John J. Sparkman, of Alabama's Eighth District, removed his coat in the privacy of his inner office and at once became apprehensive of a matter that seems to be of great concern to all new Congressmen from the deep South.

The matter of their concern is the weather—the weather of Washington's famed summers. In all the interviews of new Congressmen, not one from the North has shown any disposition of dread of the oncoming summer. But nearly all the deep Southern Congressmen—men from the hot, slumberous and languid climes—appear in suspense of June, July and August, and say so with the dismal feeling of men who know that not even an act of Congress can regulate the weather.

And so John J. Sparkman said almost at once, "I hear that the summer weather here is of very bad repute."

He talked awhile of the weather, but eventually he got around to the TVA. Anyone from his section of Alabama would get around sooner or later to the TVA. "It has done wonders for us down there," said Sparkman. He went to his desk and produced a batch of pictures of the TVA's vast projects.

These were of great dams, spanning great rivers, and of crowds of workmen with satisfied faces. "Power," said the Representative meditatively; "that power should be made available to every home, regardless of how small the home is. And I want to see an extension of the soil conservation program, and an extension of the fertilizer program. It should be manufactured and sold at the lowest possible price."

The Representative was talking from a Congressional chair, by grace of the circumstance that once of along time ago he couldn't find a newspaper job. That was after his graduation from the University of Alabama. In college he was editor of the "Crimson White," liked it, and had a notion that maybe, after graduation, he would be a newspaperman. But he couldn't find a newspaper job. Somehow, when he recalled the fact, Sparkman seemed glad.

He was glad, because even back in his childhood days he had notions of public office. He didn't attempt to do anything about it when he first left college. Rather, with his Phi Beta Kappa key jingling just above his waistline, he began the practice of law. His career was no more exciting than that. He remained in the firm, established in Huntsville, until his election to Congress. Like most everyone else, he ran at the insistence of friends.

In private life now, he is a major in the Organized Reserves, a member of the Masons and the Woodmen of the World. He came here with one major promise: To give Alabama's Eighth District efficient representation.

A.F.L. Prepares 4-Point Drive As Parley Ends

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 30.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor adjourned its week-long conference late today, instructing President William Green to launch a four-point campaign against John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. The council will meet again in Atlantic City August 21.

A protest filed by the Carpenteers International Union against a dual position occupied by Charles B. Howard as president of the Typographical Union and secretary for the C. I. O., was placed on the agenda of the Federation's National convention in Denver in October.

Green, who left immediately after the meeting for his home in Coshocton, Ohio, said Howard, although a member of the federation's executive council, also was recognized as an officer of the rival organization.

A report submitted by Frank A. Morrison, of Washington, secretary-treasurer, indicated a "paid and reported membership of the 103 nanational and international unions local unions" May 29, of 3,000,670.

The figure, Morrison said, does not include membership of the 10 National and International unions suspended September 5, 1936, and represents a gain of 560,614 members for the nine months "over the average membership of the fiscal year ended August 31, 1936."

Notice of the council's action in approving the four-point program will be sent immediately to central bodies. Green said they would be instructed to move toward expulsion of Lewis rebels, and take steps toward approval of the proposed doubling of assessments to provide funds for the federation's "war chest."

New Security Lists Slump During April

By the Associated Press.

The securities commission said yesterday an unsettled bond market caused a sharp decline in registrations of new securities in April.

The 161 April registrations, totaling $288,076,000 were the lowest since last November and compared with $469,907,000 in March.

Woman Cab Driver Launching a Drive For 'Strong Union'

Mrs. Lillian Botkin, one of Washington's woman taxicab drivers, yesterday was carrying on a campaign by which she hoped to improve the lot of the city's cab drivers at least to the extent that they are able to earn more than $2.30 a day.

Mrs. Botkin put in 12 hours yesterday behind the wheel of her cab and all she was able to earn for herself and two children was $2.30.

So she came up to The Post with a handbill advertising a meeting of Industrial Brotherhood of Taxi Drivers at 8:30 tonight at 808 I street northwest. The meeting, she pointed out, is for the purpose of reorganizing the brotherhood which has disintegrated somewhat due to the apathy of taxi drivers toward their "plight."

"Mrs. Norton (Representative Mary Norton, chairman of the House District Committee) told us that the thing for us to do was to organize good and strong and then we'd get what we wanted," she said.

What Mrs. Botkin wants is fewer cabs on the streets.

U. S. Farm Income Hits 7-Year Peak

By the Associated Press.

Government economists estimated yesterday the income of farmers will approach the $4,000,000,000 mark for the first half of this year, to set a seven-year peak for cash income.

Exact tabulation of the six-month total will be available in August, but official figures for the first four months of this year placed cash income at $2,604,000,000, an increase of $554,000,000, or 27 per cent above the same period last year, and largest since 1930.

Sharp climbs in the price of cotton, wheat, corn and other major products of the farm over last year's levels were credited for the rise. Volume of marketing this year has been 8 per cent smaller, economists said.

Relief Victory Seems Certain For Roosevelt

Free Hand in Spending May Cost Peace of Party Organization.

to throw out the window the arrangements for co-operation among the three blocs, Cartwright was deprecatory of the word "blocs." He said any such agreement as that was very vague, only a tacit assumption the trio would work together. The impression he left is that the concessions given the PWA and flood control blocs will result in the House riding roughshod over the highway proponents tomorrow.

Many members privately expressed the view, that the House, having given vent to its irritation with Hopkins and the general diminution of House patronage in recent years, ultimately will pass a bill conforming generally to the President's wishes.

In the first place, Mr. Roosevelt insists upon withdrawal of all earmarking amendments, they point out. His compromises largely are contingent upon factors which may arise in the future. He is represented by House leaders as agreeing to provide PWA funds for projects in communities which have held bond elections and are awaiting allotments. Additionally, he is willing to proceed with replacement of most of the 1,178 schoolhouses regarded as unsafe.

Eyes Focussed on Senate.

Beiter said yesterday he expected PWA expenditures under this agreement would reach $150,000,000. The flood control leader, Starnes, said at least $45,000,000 would be spent on flood control, but under the agreement reported by House leaders the President is represented as willing to agree to such expenditure only if sufficiant relief labor is available.

If a similar condition is accepted by the Roads Committee tomorrow, the discretion granted the President and, through him, the relief agencies, in the original bill will not be modified.

As a showdown neared on the $1,500,000,000 relief measure in the House, much attention was focused on the Senate, where great strength has developed for a $1,000,000,000 bill. This drive is sponsored by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Byrnes, generally regarded a Roosevelt lieutenant, has even made a Nation-wide radio appeal in behalf of a $500,000,000 cut, a figure which the President has made clear he regards as insufficient.

With the Congressional alignment still uncertain, Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, announced last night there was a 3.3 per cent increase in those requiring relief during February, as compared with January.

"Although a slight decline was indicated from February to March," the report continued, "the total in the latter month was still 2.4 per cent above January . . .

"It is estimated that the total in the continental United States in January was 1,670,000, compared with 2,219,000 for the corresponding month of 1936. The most recent February figure is an estimate of 1,725,000 compared with 2,136,000 a year ago, and the March figures are 1,710,000 and 2,007,000 for the years 1937 and 1936, respectively."

Another WPA statement of yesterday was an appeal to private industry to find jobs for nearly 500,000 young persons who will be dropped from the National Youth Administration's pay rolls within a few weeks.

Text of Appeal.

"We hope that employers everywhere will scrutinize their personnel needs to the end that as many of these young people as possible will be placed," Aubrey Williams, NYA executive director, said.

"Their need for employment is demonstrated by the fact that they have been forced to work part time during the last nine months in order to attend school or college. If they are cast adrift now without any source of income, many will suffer seriously.

"The pressure of these young job seekers on the labor market is not particularly welcome just now from an economic standpoint. However, it will have to be faced, since most of them are definitely in need of work and we know they will make every effort to get it.

"The National Youth Administration has always recognized that there are certain types of beginners' jobs which rightfully belong to the young, inexperienced worker. Such jobs as these can be filled by youth without seriously affecting the employment of experienced, adult workers with families to support.

"A co-operative and sympathetic attitude on the part of employers, large and small, is needed now in order to uncover as many of these jobs as possible. The sudden lopping off of $3,000,000 monthly pay roll for a particularly needy group of people cannot be effected without serious consequences. The loss can be mitigated only through increased opportunities in private employment."

1934 Gross Incomes Show Marked Increase

By the Associated Press.

The Internal Revenue Bureau reported yesterday corporations filing income and profits tax returns had gross incomes of $100,831,253,000 in 1934.

Bureau statistics listed gross income of $46,752,366,000 for corporations filing 1933 tax returns, but officials said the figures were not strictly comparable because of changes in tax laws.

These changes, they said, brought additional corporations under corporate levies in 1934.

C. I. O. to Push Wide Campaign For Members

Answers A. F. of L. Action; Brophy Will 'Invite' Longshoremen.

By the Associated Press.

John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization answered the American Federation of Labor's new bid for supremacy in the labor field with announcement yesterday of a membership drive intended to penetrate every unorganized industry.

As the federation shifted to the offensive, John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., said the C. I. O. soon would move into every industry which has no labor organization or where existing unions "are not taking care of their members."

The C. I. O., he added, does not intend to seek a foothold in such places as the building crafts or the highly organized railroad brotherhoods.

Lewis and Brophy, renewing their titanic struggle with William Green, A. F. of L. president, over industrial and craft unionism, maintained strict silence on the five-State steel strike. They said Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee at Youngstown, Ohio, would speak for them.

Brophy Leaves for West.

Brophy was on his way today to the Pacific Northwest, where he said he will "invite" longshoremen and a woodcutters' federation to leave the A. F. of L. He will attend a maritime convention in Portland next week.

As Green prepared to create a new department of maritime unions to combat the Lewis movement, Harry Bridges, West Coast president of the International Longshoremen's Association, predicted the 20,000 workers in his organization would quit the federation if it continued to oppose the C. I. O. and "progressive unionism."

He and Brophy said they hoped a new C. I. O. National Maritime Association would develop which would enlist support from both East and West Coast locals of the I. L. A. Bridges pledged his union's support to this movement.

Laughs at "War Chest."

Brophy smiled when he learned Green had ordered expulsion of Chicago and New York A. F. of L. unions affiliated with the C. I. O.

"That most certainly is not unexpected," he said. "It is only a technical expulsion, because we have been working toward different goals all along."

"This $35,000 war chest the A. F. of L. has been talking about doesn't amount to anything," he said, "because we've found by experience that amount would be inadequate. There's nothing new in their announcement about abandoning temporarily craft unions, because they've been gradually getting over to our industrial type of unions for many months."

The A. F. of L., meeting in Cincinnati, decided to raise $35,000 monthly in the fight against Lewis.

Hail Wagner Decision.

C. I. O. leaders expressed the opinion, meanwhile, the Supreme Court's decision validating the Wagner labor act had sent the organization "away winging" in the Nation-wide labor fight.

They claimed these advantages as both sides apparently settled down for a long struggle:

1. The Wagner act makes it difficult for A. F. of L. craft unions to win workers' elections to determine a collective bargaining agency.

2. The C. I. O. has approximately the same membership as its rival and claims to be ready to move ahead rapidly.

3. Federation locals have been breaking away from the Green standard and have made overtures to the Lewis faction.

Socialist Bolters Demand Peace in Ranks of Workers

Pittsburgh, May 30 (AP).—The Social Democratic Federation, right-wingers who split with the Socialist Party, called today for unity between organized labor's warring factions and elected Mayor Jasper McLevy, of Bridgeport, Conn., as national chairman.

Approximately 150 delegates from 19 States attended the two-day meeting, which closed tonight in a banquet where Charles Edward Russell, Washington journalist and lecturer declared "the profit system of society no longer meets society's needs."

Russell said America must "come to recognize the fact frankly" that "another system is imperatively demanded," other than that of profits, and declared "if we are wise we shall begin at once to substitute the sane and reasonable system of production for use."

Police Heads Shifted In Montgomery County

A shake-up in commanding officers of the three Montgomery County police substations was announced yesterday by Chief J. William Garrett, who said the changes were in line with a policy of familiarizing police with all sections of the county.

Sergt. Earl H. Burdine was transferred from command of Bethesda substation to command of Rockville; Sergt. Roy Snyder was transferred from Silver Spring to Bethesda, and Sergt. Joseph B. Nolte from Rockville to Silver Spring. The changes became effective yesterday.

4 Die, 88 Hurt in Steel Rioting As Police Fire on Angry Crowd

Dr. S. J. Nickamin, staff physician at South Chicago Hospital, who was in the receiving room when the injured men were brought in, said they looked as if they came from a "virtual massacre."

A. G. Patterson, financial secretary of Local 65, of the C. I. O. in South Chicago, said he was on the scene of the riot because before the trouble he had been designated by the strikers as a Red Cross worker to treat those expected to be hurt.

Blinded by Tear Gas.

"Two leaders of the march were up ahead carrying American flags, he said, "All were going along, and then the riot broke out spontaneously. Someone started to scuffle with a policeman. Then I heard several shots. Men and women were slugged all around me. Police released tear gas. I was blinded and fell in a heap with a bunch of others. I got up and saw the fellow next to me was shot in the stomach. I grabbed him, but the police took him away from me and loaded him in a patrol wagon. The whole thing didn't last more than five or six minutes."

A. W. Anderson, of Indiana Harbor, Ind., a C. I. O. organizer, said he saw about 50 persons helped into an emergency relief station set up by the strikers. Fifteen of them were women, he said, all of whom were bleeding about the face.

Peter Rimac, who runs a store on the edge of the field in which the fighting took place, said he watched the affray from a second-floor window.

"Between 400 and 500 shots were fired in about three minutes," he said. "The policemen had been lined up single file for about five blocks across the field when the marchers met them. When the crowd tried to press through, the officers closed around them and the riot broke out. I saw scores of men and women fall."

Pullmans House Steel Workers.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 30 (AP).—Pullman cars and a complete field kitchen were pressed into service tonight as Republic Steel Co. officials announced they planned to continue operations despite a strike called by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, C. I. O. affiliate, last week.

As the strike went into its fourth day, Martin H. Stearns, company spokesman, said 25 Pullman cars had been shunted in on sidings in the plant to provide sleeping quarters for men who wished to continue working.

C. I. O. Rival Rallies Quit.

Weirton, W. Va., May 30 (AP).—Only a few hisses and boos broke the peace that accompanied rival rallies of the Committee for Industrial Organization and Security League Steel Workers today near the mills of the Weirton Steel Co.

Set up to preserve the Weirton workers' employes representation plan during John L. Lewis' steel organization campaign, the Security League paraded the length of the town's 3-mile main street to a baseball park without disturbance.

While George Sokolsky, labor writer, was denouncing the Lewis movement at the ball park rally, the C. I. O. forces tooted through town in automobiles to a soft drink parlor for their meeting.

France to Ask Armament Cut, Daladier Says

Speaks at A. E. F. Cemetery Dedication; Plan Goes to League Today.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 30.—Edouard Daladier, France's vice premier and minister of national defense, told an American Memorial Day gathering today his government was preparing to make new proposals for world limitation, reduction and control of armaments.

France's move will be made at Geneva, Daladier disclosed in a speech at the dedication of an American Expeditionary Force chapel at Suresnes Cemetery, on the outskirts of Paris.

He spoke from a stand in the midst of flower-decked graves of American World War dead, many of whom fell while fighting for France in the Lafayette Escadrille.

Diplomatic quarters here said the French proposals will be initiated at Geneva tomorrow by Joseph Paul Boncour, permanent French delegate to the League of Nations.

Premier Blum indicated such a move was impending in a speech yesterday.

Seven A. E. F. chapels were inaugurated in the most extensive Memorial Day ceremonies ever held in France. The general theme, as in past years, was the friendship between France and the United States, but this year there was a tendency for speakers to stress the belief the United States must stand with France and the British empire to preserve democracy against dictatorships.

Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the A. E. F. and now chairman of the American Monuments Commission, dedicated the new chapel at Romagne Sous Montfaucon in the heart of the Argonne battlefield, where 14,255 American soldiers are buried in the largest of the A. E. F. cemeteries.

"The time has not arrived when preparation against war by our country may be ignored," he declared. He called for good will on the part of world leaders.

Bermuda Clipper Finishes 2d Trip

New York, May 30 (AP).—The Bermuda Clipper, the Pan American Airways flying boat blazing a passenger and mail route between New York and Bermuda, completed its second round trip today, alighting at its Port Washington, Long Island, base at 3:15 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The nonstop flight consumed a little over five hours. While the large Sikorsky plane was still winging its way north, the British Imperial Airways' Cavalier, a four-motored ship also, was bound for Bermuda to complete its second round trip. It took off at 11:30 a. m. (E. S. T.).

The two airliners intend to cooperate in a regular service scheduled to open in a few weeks.

U. S. Entered War 'Without Reason,' Maverick Asserts

Hagerstown, Md., May 30 (AP).—Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, speaking at the Memorial Day exercises at Funkstown today, declared "my personal opinion is that there was no reason for America going into the World War," and there may have been 'reasons' of a kind." Representative Maverick said, "but there were no real reasons why the common man of America should have been taken into the Army and sent across the sea to be killed on foreign soil."

U.S. Undertakes Vocation Study To Aid Jobless

Roosevelt Advisory Group to Correlate Federal, Local Education.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Education has undertaken a study of vocational training as a major weapon against the dual problem of relief and unemployment.

Dr. John T. David, secretary to the committee headed by Dr. Floyd Reeves, of the University of Chicago, said yesterday the committee is going into that field as one of the important educational developments created by the depression.

Mr Roosevelt asked the committee last week to give "more extended" study to the whole subject of Federal relationship to local education and report before the next Congress session.

The possibility of cutting down unemployment costs by reducing the proportion of unskilled workers in America's labor market, David said, in discussing the study, "is one aspect you can't get away from."

$14,483,000 Provided.

The House recently approved a $14,483,000 appropriation—more than six times the budget director's recommendation—for vocational training.

One of the supporters of the larger appropriation was representative Allen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, who said vocational school graduates in his district were 90 per cent employed, earning as much as $55 a week.

David said the committee will make no report until next December or January since the President has increased its scope from vocational education alone to the whole field of the Government's relationship with State and local conduct of education.

Laps Over Hoover Study.

Going into the larger field, the committee will cover some of the ground reviewed by a President Hoover-appointed committee in 1929-31. This committee recommended centralization of the Government's educational activities in a department of education, headed by a Cabinet ranking Secretary.

Davis said the extended study now in progress, however, will not necessarily consider such a proposal. President Hoover opposed the creation of an education department and the suggestion won no support in Congress.

Dr. Charles R. Mann, president of the American Council of Education and chairman of the Hoover committee, agreed yesterday the proposal is not likely to be revived.

George Baker, Noted Banker, Dies on Yacht

Mrs. Baker, who came aboard the Philippine Clipper.

Physicians reported Mr. Baker rallied for a time, but he took a turn for the worse yesterday.

Dr. J. R. Judd, who joined the attending physicians on the arrival of the yacht, gave the banker a blood transfusion last night. He boarded the Viking again early this morning as the financier's condition became alarming.

Dr. Judd said death was caused by heart failure resulting from peritonitis. He said Mr. Baker became markedly worse about 9 p. m., later failing to respond to tsimulants and finally lapsing into unconsciousness.

Mrs. Baker remained calm, Dr. Judd said. She stayed aboard the Viking.

Graduate of Harvard.

His fortune has been estimated at more than $150,000,000, ranging as high as $500,000,000.

The son of a banking colossus, George F. Baker, sr., who died in May, 1931, at the age of 91, Baker inherited his father's reticence and shunned the spotlight with the avidity of the elder J. P. Morgan, in whose office he began his business career.

Born in New York City, March 19, 1878, he was graduated with a degree of bachelor of arts from Harvard University in 1899. Much in the same manner as John D. Rockefeller, jr., slowly took up the burden of his aging father, young Baker gradually assumed the immense responsibilities of controlling the fabulous millions pyramided by his parent during his reign as head of Manhattan's First National Bank, or "Baker's Bank," as it was sometimes called.

On the death of his father, George, jr. stepped into the role of chairman of the bank and carried on, in many ways, the Baker tradition of quiet obscurity from public attention but intense activity behind the scenes.

He was a director of numerous large corporations, including the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., General Electric, United States Steel, General Motors, Pullman, New Jersey General Security, New York Central Railroad, and the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, in addition to being a trustee of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. and the United States Trust Co.

A quiet, far from colorful personality, his only extra-business interest lay in yachting trips aboard his graceful 272-foot craft, Viking.

His retiring disposition came naturally from his father, the eighth in a line of shrewd, blue-eyed, hard-bitten Yankees from Boston, who became the richest most powerful and most taciturn commercial banker in United States history.

Quit Board Posts.

In the summer of 1936, he resigned, without comment or explanation, from the boards of the General Electric Co., New York Central Railroad and Consolidated Gas Co., and shortly thereafter he left two other traditional Baker seats, United States Steel and Pullman Co.

At the time, reports said that he was in poor health.

He had two sons and two daughters, Florence T., Edith B., George F., and Grenville K. He was one of Manhattan's leading clubmen, belonging at one time to no less than 15 clubs, including the University, Knickerbocker, Union League, Harvard, New York Yacht, the Brook, the Links, Piping Rock and Racquet and Tennis.

Huge Tax Likely.

By the United Press.

The death of George F. Baker, New York banker, may enrich the Government by as much as $347,362,600 through the Federal tax on his estate, a Treasury expert estimated last night.

The estimate was based on reports Baker was worth about $500,000,000. The estate tax on holdings of $50,000,000 and above was fixed at 70 per cent in the revenue act of 1935, with an exemption on the first $40,000.

his home. He was brought to Casualty Hospital.

Ludwig Schuler, 32, 1651 Fuller street northwest, also was brought to Casualty Hospital for treatment when he was struck by a driver who failed to stop. Physicians said he sustained a fractured pelvis and cuts.

Margaret Thompson, 18, of 8623 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., was treated at Walter Reed Hospital for concussion of the brain and cuts to her legs after she was thrown from the tandem seat of a motorcycle following a collision at Piney Branch road and Butternut street northwest.

The motorcycle was operated by Raymond E. Thompson, 22, of the Silver Spring address. The automobile was driven by Francis E. McGilvery, 19, 28 Bryant street northeast. Police made no arrests.

A woman and her son were injured when their automobile was struck on Bladensburg road at the entrance to Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

Woman, Son Injured.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Ellen Mawson, 46, of 3805 M street northwest, suffered undetermined head injuries and was admitted to Casualty Hospital. The son, William Mawson, 27, driver of the car, suffered cuts. He was released.

Maryland police said Mrs. Mawson was thrown from the car by the force of the impact. H. A. Towers, 239 Tenth street northeast, driver of the other car, was charged with reckless driving at the Hyattsvile police station.

John G. Linthicum, 43, 3915 Thirtieth place northeast, walked into an automobile driven by Thomas F. Rogers, 529½ Ninth street northeast, on Bladensburg road near Cottage City, Md.

Three persons were injured in an accident in Somerset, Montgomery County. Taken to Georgetown Hospital, they were treated for cuts and bruises.

His automobile overturning on a curve near Forestville, Md., Ernest Stewart, 18, 501 B street northeast, suffered concussion of the brain, fractured right wrist and lacerations. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Raymond Adams, 4, of the 700 block Sixth street northwest, was knocked down by a car when he ran into the street in front of his home. He was taken to Emergency Hospital by Wilbur A. Turlington, 27, of Baltimore, driver of the machine. Raymond suffered multiple lacerations and shock.

Struck at Fifth and G streets northwest, Samuel Ishkanian, 44, of 730 Fifth street northwest, was treated at Sibley Hospital for bruises and abrasions. Police said the automobile was driven by Tony Kline, 28, of 204 Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Two women were injured when automobiles in which they were riding crashed at Wisconsin and Dorset avenues, Bethesda.

A car operated by Miss Natalie S. Ostlund, 40, of 2002 P street northwest, emerging from Dorset avenue, was struck by an automobile operated by Daniel Reppert, of Orwigsburg, Pa. The Ostlund car overturned, throwing Miss Ostlund out on her head. The impact forced the head of Mrs. Daniel Reppert through the windshield. Several children riding in the car were slightly bruised.

The women were taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Bethesda Rescue Squad. Both had been injured about the head, but physicians said they did not believe their hurts to be serious.

Pilot Escapes Crash as Motor Gives Up on Take-Off for Race

By the Associated Press.

Lambert-St. Louis Airport, St. Louis, May 30.—Art Chester, crack Los Angeles speed pilot, narrowly escaped a crash today when the motor of his cream-colored "Jeep" quit on the takeoff for a 50-mile race at the St. Louis air show.

The tiny plane, wobbling badly, came down to a rough landing but Chester managed to keep control and hold the ship upright until it bounded to a stop just a few feet from where Roger Don Rae, young Lansing, Mich., flier, made a sensational crash landing yesterday and received severe injuries.

Rudy Kling, of Lemont, Ill., after winning the race with a speed of 233.7 miles an hour, had difficulty lowering his retractable landing gear. He was unable to lower the left wheel completely and, after circling the airport twice, came down at high speed to an erratic, jarring landing.

Another Has Trouble.

Marion McKeen, of Santa Monica, Calif., who finished second, likewise had difficulty setting his red racer down. He came in fast and bounced from side to side, first on one wheel and then on another, before coming to an upright stop.

S. J. Wittman, of Oshkosh, Wis., was third. His speed was 202.1 miles an hour. McKeen's was 229.2.

Like a silver bullet streaking through the sky, the United States Army's new secret pursuit plane, with its designer, Maj. Alexander de Seversky, at the controls, gave a speed and climbing demonstration. The former Russian World War ace zoomed low across the field at a speed exceeding 300 miles an hour.

War Department restrictions prevented what air show officials had hoped would be an attempt by Seversky to set a new world-speed record in the plane, said to be the fastest military pursuit craft in the world.

Capt. Alexandro de Papana, of the Rumanian Air Force, flying a German plane, whipped through a series of graceful maneuvers in the acrobatic contest.

In contrast with the quiet grace of the Rumanian's performance, Capt. Leonard J. Povey, American-born technical adviser of the Cuban air forces, roared his silver-and-yellow plane into power slips, outside loops and violent snap-rolls.

Chester streaked home first in his speedy blue biplane to win the Frank E. Phillips Trophy in a 40-mile race, eight laps around a triangular, pylon-marked course. Strung out behind him were Robert Glass, Dallas, Tex.; Jack Gatty, Wichita, Kans., and McKeen. Chester won one race and finished second in another yesterday.

High above the field, Tex Rankin, Hollywood movie stunt flier, combined outside loops with grace rolls, inverted turns and spins. He flew a stock model plane instead of the especially designed craft used by other acrobatic competitors.

Poppy Anchor Ceremony Honors Sailor Heroes

Annapolis, Md., May 30 (AP).—A poppy anchor was tossed overboard into the Chesapeake Bay near here today in honor of American sailors killed in wars. The ceremony was sponsored by the Admiral Robert E. Peary Ship, No. 427, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Washington. The ceremonies took place off Greenbury Point Light on a subchaser attached to the Naval Academy.

District Man Drowns Near Morris Point

Dive From Yacht Into Potomac Fatal to Claude Burch.

Claude Burch, 30, of 1520 Good Hope road southeast, was drowned yesterday while swimming in the Potomac River off Morris Point, 12 miles from Leonardtown, Md.

Burch, whose father is a florist in Anacostia, was a member of a yachting party. After diving from the boat, he was seized with a cramp and went under. His companions pulled him from the water and Miss Fis Wright, a Washington nurse, tried to revive him.

Dr. R. V. Palmer, acting coroner, issued a certificate of accidental drowning.

Last night, his father, Claude Burch, sr., said his son left home Saturday night, informing his father he was going to Leonardtown with some friends to spend the week-end. It was his first trip there of the season.

Burch was born in Anacostia on April 25, 1907. He received his education there at St. Theresa's Parochial School. At 21 he was married, but had not been living with his wife for several years. He was employed in the stock room of the Packard Motor Car Co., at Seventeenth street and Kalorama road northwest.

He was the oldest of five children—three brothers beside himself, Russell A., Louis E., Richard L., and one sister, Elsie. His mother died five years ago.

4 Men Arrested Wearing Trunks On Va. Beaches

Hampton, Va., May 30 (AP).—Three white men and one colored man are the first to face charges under the new Elizabeth City County ordinance which outlaws scant bathing suits and which became effective today.

State Officer A. A. Anderson brought the four to the county jail here. They gave their names as William Orprendick and John Botts, of Langley Field; Charles H. Payne, no address, and William McQueen, Negro, formerly of Staunton, now of Newport News. The first three were said by the officer to have been arrested at Buckroe Beach and the latter at Bay Shore. Officers said the men were on the beach clad only in trunks. The three white men posted bond.

The new ordinance specifies that "trunks only" come under the ban.

The men will have a hearing tomorrow before Trial Justice John H. Bowen, of Elizabeth City County.

4 Rivers Garden Club Show Proves Success

Annapolis, May 30 (AP).—The annual spring show of the Four Rivers Garden Club in the little glass house on the Emergency Hospital grounds was the largest the club has ever held. The exhibits totaled 128.

$78,000,000 In 'Windfall' Taxes Delayed

Court Decision Required for Collection; Aid to 1938 Budget Seen.

By the Associated Press.

Fiscal officials revealed yesterday they have abandoned hope of collecting about $78,000,000 in so-called "windfall" taxes this fiscal year.

They said the Supreme Court must validate the windfall levies before they will yield any major revenue. Because no case is pending, the court cannot rule before this fiscal period ends June 30.

The levies were enacted in 1936 at President Roosevelt's request as a stop-gap to recoup part of the revenue loss resulting from invalidation of processing taxes under the old Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The imposts are aimed at processors who pass on to consumers or others the AAA processing taxes.

Numerous suits have challenged the legality of the taxes, and officials said it is improbable any material collections will be received this fiscal period. Listed as an $82,000,000 revenue item in Mr. Roosevelt's January budget, the taxes thus far have provided only $4,000,000.

The Supreme Court already has validated a law banning claims for processing taxes paid under the AAA unless it is proved the levies were not passed on to consumers. This court decision did not improve the Government's budgetary position, however, because no provision had been made for refunding the taxes.

Officials said yesterday court approval of the windfall taxes would help narrow the gap between income and outgo during the next fiscal year, because the $78,000,000 of delayed collections would flow in then. This would whittle the estimated $418,000,000 deficit for next year by a corresponding amount.

Authorities added that loss of the collections this year probably will not increase the $2,557,000,000 deficit projected for June 30, because the windfall-tax litigation was taken into account in President Roosevelt's revised budget forecast last month.

It is possible, officials reported, the estimated deficit may even be scaled down $100,000,000 or so by an upturn in revenues over expectations and a drop in expenditures.

Dr. Ella Boole To Lead Parley For W. C. T. U.

World President Will Go Into Conference Here With Aides.

Affairs of the W. C. T. U. world convention, which opens here Thursday, will be placed today in the hands of Dr. Ella Boole, world president, upon her arrival from Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dr. Boole, it was pointed out at convention headquarters yesterday, will go into conference immediately with her assisting officers, including Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, national president, who have been on the pre-convention scene for several days.

This will be the second world conclave of the organization over which Dr. Boole has presided. She took office following her election at the W. C. T. U. convention in Toronto in 1931.

In Conference Wednesday.

While the international president is expected to participate in the conference on alcohol education, which opens this afternoon in the Hotel Washington, her first official meeting will be with the world executive committee Wednesday morning. Final plans for the convention, which opens with a general session Thursday morning in Constitution Hall, will be made.

Arriving today with Dr. Boole will be Miss Agnes E. Slack, of London, honorary W. C. T U. secretary.

Already in the Capital is Mrs. Evelyn Strang, of New South Wales, Australia, an international vice president, who has long been prominent in world activities of the organization. Beginning with her work in local and state unions in Australia, she was made national president of the Australian W. C. T. U., and served for several years in that capacity.

Mrs. Gauntlett Here.

Among the world-prominent women here today is Mrs. C. T. Gauntlett, of Tokyo, Japan, a member of the World's W. C. T. U. advisory committee. Mrs. Gauntlett has played a conspicuous role in a half dozen recent world assemblies of the organization. A Japanese woman who married an Englishman, Mrs. Gauntlett has a command of the languages of both nationalities. She has frequently served the conventions as an interpreter. For several years she has served on the official board of the W. C. T. U. Japanese Union, and is now president of the Pan-Pacific Women's Conference, with which the W. C. T. U. is affiliated. When she leaves Washington she will go to Vancouver, British Columbia, where she will preside over the fourth conference of the Pan-Pacific Women's Conference, scheduled for July 12 to 24.

Plans will also be forwarded today for the international worship service at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday in Calvary Baptist Church. A young people's rally Wednesday night in First Congregational Church is expected to be a highlight of the early part of the convention.

Degenerate Stabs Girl In Ford Charity Home

Detroit, May 30 (AP).—Police conducted a widespread search today for a degenerate who invaded an Episcopal Girls Home established 16 years ago by Henry Ford, stabbed 15-year-old Carrie Wellsey and fled in the darkness amid the screams of the 35 wards of the home.

Surgeons at Henry Ford Hospital said the injured girl's condition was serious. She was wounded in the right temple, and her hands were cut as she grappled with her assailant.

Ford Strike Movement Wanes as Slump Starts

Detroit, May 30 (AP).—A prediction there would be no strike at the Ford Motor Co.'s main plant here this summer came today from members of the United Automobile Workers of America. The "summer slump" in automobile production already has begun, it was explained. A strike during the slack season would have relatively little effect on output, but a prolonged shutdown might demoralize union forces.

'Mike' Kelley, Noted Trainer, Called to Greener Paddocks

Washingtonian, Active Until March, Was 81; Local Authority on Racing; Never Stayed Home When Tracks Were Busy.

After more than a half century of working with fast-stepping steeds, Mike often had wished, his friends said yesterday, to die "on the race track."

Circumstances surrounding his death all but fulfilled his long-standing desire. Mike died of complications resulting from a hip blow dealt him by a horse he was training at eBnning March 6. In that accident Mike suffered a fractured hip, and he had been bedridden since.

Mike was one of the oldest trainers in the game—and one of the most active. For 30 years he had made his home at 201 F street northeast. But he was there only during the winter, when the race tracks were idle.

"When May came he was off," said Mrs. Lenora Reuter, housekeeper at Mike's residence, "it might be to Canada, or it might be to Cuba—then again it might be to Florida, or any place where there is a track. He went to all of them."

Mike had trained horses for many owners in his lifetime, Jim Bean, Bernie Harding, George Goodacre, are only a few of the horsemen for whom he worked.

He was widely known as a man of few words. Because of his first-hand information about the horses he trained and those he watched being trained, his advice about their abilities was frequently sought.

When asked if he thought a horse had a chance to win, his favorite reply was, "I think so."

Mike was once a dancer, Mrs. Reauter recalled yesterday, and ran a dancing school. He never lost the agility he developed in that earlier career.

Mike's body was taken last night to the Timothy Hanlon funeral home at 641 H street northeast. No relatives survive.

The yard where she was found, police said, is dark and no one apparently left or entered the house during the time the woman was unconscious. She had been there about seven hours before being discovered. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death due to a heart attack. Mrs. Conway, a widow, is survived by a brother who lives in Baltimore.

U. of M. Ushers In June Week; Fiske Speaks

Baltimore Cleric Urges Graduates to Give Useful Service.

The Rev. Charles Fiske, of Baltimore, Md., speaking to several hundred graduates attending baccalaureate exercises at the University of Maryland yesterday, charged them with the moral responsibility of living a life of service.

Referring to the vast appropriations made annually for the upkeep of educational institutions, the Rev. Fiske declared:

"The community expects to receive something in return for its investment in your lives.

"We are not educating you so you can go out and engage in the merry game of grabbing as long as the grabbing is good. We expect service."

"Misuse of Power."

Decrying the "misuse of power in the past," the Rev. Fiske said:

"A rich man dies. He leaves a lot of money to public institutions and people forget where he got the money."

Declaring there was not a student in the country who was not indebted to society for his education, the Rev. Fiske added:

"You graduates at the University of Maryland have been piling up promissory notes. Now is the time for collection."

The traditional exercises, marking the beginning of "June Week" at the university, included the reading of selections from the scriptures by Dr. A. F. Woods, a former president of the institution, and the singing of hymns by choir composed of students and graduates.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, presided.

A round of social and class exercises will be held this week. Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland will deliver the principal address at the graduation exercises next Saturday in the Ritchie Coliseum.

Historic Road Draws Crowds To Maryland

Three-Notch Trail Is a Fragrant Mass of Wild Flowers.

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., May 30.—Bright spring weather brought a host of visitors from Baltimore, Washington and other places today to see the profusion of laurel and wild flowers on the historic Three-Notch road between Mechanicsville and Ridge.

Although wild flowers bloom luxuriantly in other sections of St. Marys County, nowhere do they seem so profuse and fragrant as along this woodland route—one of the first ever traveled by the white man in Maryland.

Fragrant honeysuckle vines with the laurel for the attention of flower lovers. In low-lying places along the route sweet-scented magnolias also may be found.

The wild flowers began to bloom earlier in the season, but they now are nearing the peak of beauty. During the last days of May and the first week of June, they are at their best.

Not in several years had so many come out to view the beauty spots as today. At times during the day, an almost steady procession of automobiles passed along the Three-Notch road. The weather was ideal and many of the visitors parked at convenient places to better observe places of especial beauty.

A short time later, two men answering the description given by Godfrey robbed Bernard C. Swiss, 31, of 1312 Sixteenth street northwest, after they jumped on the running-board of his car at Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Swiss said both men were armed with revolvers, and asserted they made him drive them to Ninth and O streets northwest. They drove away in the car, Swiss said.

Dr. White's Resignation.

Regret at the resignation of Leonard D. White, for three years a member of the United States Civil Service Commission, is tempered by the realization that he can probably do more for the cause of good government in the classrooms of the University of Chicago than he can in his present position.

In the report on reorganization of the Government's administrative agencies, it was pointed out that the Civil Service Commission is not "appropriately staffed to do the constructive work which modern personnel management presupposes." The absence of an adequate staff, it was said, "has imposed upon the commission a negative, protective and legalistic role, whereas the need today is for a positive, constructive and active central personnel agency."

No doubt Dr. White has felt keenly the relative impotence of the commission during the past three years when the patronage system has experienced a mushroom-like growth. In resigning, he takes occasion to warn the country that "the risks that we run without a merit system are altogether too hazardous to be tolerated in the kind of civilization we are now living in." He also puts in a timely word about the importance of extending the merit system established for the Social Security Board employes to co-operating local Government agencies, largely manned by political appointees.

Perhaps some day we shall have a Civil Service administrator or administrators, selected on a competitive basis, as the President's Committee on Reorganization recommends, whose duty it would be to extend and strengthen the merit system. A person with Dr. White's expert knowledge of governmental principles and administration would be admirably equipped to carry on constructive work of this sort. But there is not sufficient scope for such pioneering activities under present conditions to warrant retention of office by a professionally trained individual who does not care for routine administrative work. His impending departure is, nonetheless, a real loss to the Government.

Grim Question.

Yesterday the Nation paid homage to the memory of 126,000 Americans who lost their lives in the World War and to the half million others who died in earlier conflicts under the Stars and Stripes. The celebration of their high sacrifices continues today. But by a bitter irony, today also marks the beginning of the annual summer slaughter on the highways in which, if current trends continue, many tens of thousands of Americans will be killed.

In Washington signs point to the tragic likelihood that there will be more traffic fatalities this year than last. In 1936, 37 persons had died in automobile accidents in the Capital by the end of May. This year the toll has reached 48, without counting the Memorial Day week-end figures. At this rate, the 1937 record in this city alone may far exceed the 99 killed here last year; similarly the Nation's total for the year may go higher than the 36,000 of 1936.

It is with grim seriousness, then, that Mr. Elderman's cartoon today asks, "Memorial for whom?"

In The Free State.

Through the enterprise of taxi drivers who split fees with the ministers, the nearby town of Elkton will continue for some while longer its business of "short-order" marriages which has been threatened with extinction through legislative action. How very commercial, some will say, how very typical of the twentieth century!

Commercial, Elkton may be—but not essentially modern. For there was Gretna Green, Scotland, which, long before Elkton, discovered the commercial value of capitalizing elopements. Up until 1754, when Lord Chancellor Hardwicke's act abolished clandestine marriages, impatient lovers in London had commonly been wedded in the Fleet Prison. Thereafter, runaway couples had to reach Scotland to be joined and Gretna Green was the first village north of the border. Arrived there, they had only to declare their wish to marry before witnesses—usually the ferryman and blacksmith—and they were one. So Gretna Green thrived for a hundred years until in 1856 the law was modified to require at least one of the contracting parties to live in Scotland three weeks before marrying.

A new law in Maryland requires only 48 hours' notice before wedding, but even this was enough to impel Elkton's parsons to end their somewhat spider-like vigils along the highways. A less easily discouraged breed, however, are the taxi drivers. By obtaining 6,400 signatures demanding a popular vote on the new law, they have won a 30-day reprieve for their principal means of livelihood.

If, by the end of next month, they can obtain 10,000 names, a referendum will be ordered. If not, Elkton will be forced to fall back on its fireworks factory for a living. This, again, would have a sort of precedent, for Gretna Green's chief activity today is the manufacture of cordite with which men, far from encouraging the propagation of their race, invite instead its eventual annihilation.

Toward Freer Trade.

Last week seven European nations sent delegates to The Hague to discuss plans for lowering trade barriers. The participants in the conference were the Netherlands government, which extended the invitation; Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Luxembourg. These are the countries that concluded the abortive Oslo pact of 1930 under which they agreed not to raise tariffs against one another without prior consultation. This time, it is reported, the signatories aim at the removal of certain quota restrictions on imports and exports of their own products while, at the same time, pledging each other not to raise existing tariffs on imports coming from other members of the group.

If Great Britain should raise objections to this agreement, as she did to the Oslo pact, on the ground that it would impair her most favored nation rights The Hague treaty may have to be cast aside. Nevertheless, last week's conference in the Netherlands capital has already served a good purpose by emphasizing the growing restiveness of trading nations under the restraints imposed by abnormally high tariffs, quotas and exchange controls. In one way or another they are trying to rid themselves of hampering restrictions that prevent the improvement in international trade from keeping pace with the expansion of domestic business.

The United States in a certain sense is playing a lone hand in the campaign to reduce tariff barriers under reciprocal trade agreements negotiated with individual countries. Great Britain and the Dominions, on the contrary, have followed the policy of granting one another preferential treatment with a view to expanding trade within the empire. The delegates to the Empire Conference, in session in London, are, however, now discussing plans for the possible extension of modified preferences to other countries.

In addition to such organized and systematic efforts to bring about greater freedom of trade there has also been some relaxation of existing restrictions by various countries as their trade position and specifically their trade balances showed improvement. In fact, the most hopeful development for the foreign trade field is the world-wide economic recovery. This has paved the way for really serious discussion of plans for leveling abnormally high trade barriers and abolishing exchange and quota restrictions.

Belief in the blessings of economic self-sufficiency is not nearly so strong at present as it was a few years ago, although there is still a strong protectionist sentiment moulding commercial policies in many countries and accounting in part for the maintenance at high levels of international trade barriers. However, the failure to remove vexatious barriers to intercourse and the delay in reforming repressive trade practices is largely the result of economic pressure. Over wide areas, for instance, stringent foreign exchange controls still exist, constituting much more formidable and insurmountable barriers to exchange of goods than do tariffs. These restrictions are an unavoidable evil because of the limited resources available to many debtor countries for meeting payments due to foreigners.

The rise in prices of agricultural products and industrial raw materials has, however, increased the exchange resources of a good many debtor countries, notably some of the South American states. This permits of a relaxation of exchange restrictions or at any rate puts such countries in a position to liberalize existing arrangements. If these favorable economic trends continue, reductions in tariffs, elimination of exchange control and abolition of quotas will be greatly facilitated. Some debtor countries will also be assisted in a return to more normal trading activities by the rapid expansion of our import trade which has outstripped the rise in exports. The result of this uneven growth has been a sharp decline in our ordinarily favorable merchandise balance. Indeed, it actually shows a substantial sum on the debit side for the first quarter of this year.

With an economic foundation for freer trade provided, international negotiations looking toward reduction or elimination of existing barriers can be undertaken with a much better chance of successful accomplishment. This assumes, of course, that the political outlook will remain reasonably good. Certainly if all nations were as peaceably inclined as those participating in the conference at The Hague, we could look forward confidently to a rapid reduction of post-war, depression-induced trade barriers.

Not Yet Won.

The chairman of the Fine Arts Commission proposes that Japanese cherry trees be planted throughout the Capital park system. One of Dr. Moore's chief arguments in support of his plan is that a wider distribution of the trees would ease traffic confusion around the Tidal Basin at blossom time. But it is safe to assume that his principal object is to meet criticisms of the plan to erect a Thomas Jefferson memorial in the basin, construction of which would require uprooting the cherry trees.

No one would have the slightest objection to more cherry trees in Washington. But the chief value of the proposal is that it calls attention to the fact that the Tidal Basin plan has not yet been scotched. The House simply deleted a $500,000 appropriation for it from the second deficiency bill. If an appropriation for the sum were to slip through in some measure, work on the foundation of the memorial might begin immediately.

It is highly doubtful whether the $3,000,000 expenditure authorized by Congress would provide more than the foundation work, borings having indicated that bedrock lies many feet under the mud of the basin's bottom. Other millions would be required to redevelop the mutilated park, rebuild dislocated highways, etc. But this would not prevent the commission from starting the work if an initial appropriation could be secured.

A bill introduced by Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, expressly forbids use of the basin as a site for the memorial. Though approved by the Library Committee, it has not yet reached the floor of the House. Until this measure has been passed by both houses of Congress, Washington's most beautiful park will remain in continuous danger of destruction. The fight to save the cherry trees should in no way be relinquished until there is full assurance that the Boylan Commission's plan has been killed.

Resorting To Facts.

In an effort to prevent declaration of a moratorium on HOLC foreclosures, and unbusinesslike methods of dealing with homeowners, that agency has addressed a letter to all Senators and Congressmen offering to investigate any complaints of harsh treatment. This is the best possible way of answering critics who seize upon every instance of alleged harsh dealing to demand concessions that would seriously hamper the efforts of the HOLC to collect from those able to pay.

In dealing with Government lending agencies the average individual resents businesslike practices which he would accept as a matter of course in private transactions. Hence Government institutions have to be prepared not only to defend their policies in general terms but also to refute extravagant and wild accusations. When the aggrieved individuals are dispossessed homeowners, the only way to silence unjust criticism is to be ready with the facts and prepared to reply to the charges brought without delay.

Edward's Anticlimax.

After titillating everyone's interest by renouncing the pomp and power of the world's greatest throne for "the woman I love," England's Edward has recently dissipated much of the dovey aura around him by insisting on the rank of royalty for his intended. The general impression had been that he and the now Mrs. Warfield would be content to find a cottage, small but perhaps well-equipped, by a waterfall where they might forget the glamour of royalty and pursue their romance. But no. It now appears that they—or at least one of the two—want a cottage, but also that they—or at least one of the two—want some sort of coronet to wear around in it. Perhaps this was only to have been expected.

Nor does the official reaction of British leaders quite measure up to sample. At the time of the abdication, nothing but praise was expressed for the firm but kindly way in which Mr. Baldwin and his colleagues bade their ruler farewell. Now, however, a new and somewhat disappointing attitude is reported from London. Quoting an obscure precedent set in Queen Victoria's time, which indicates an ill-becoming unsureness, the leaders have proclaimed that while David may sign himself "H. R. H.," not so his wife. The principal point settled by this petty dictum seems to be that in any parades or processions of the future, no outlander will march before certain duchesses.

Perhaps, however, before pooh-poohing the importance of precedence, this country might pluck a McNutt out of its own eye.

The world stands in awe of solemn men. The first rule for achieving success is to go off somewhere and lose your sense of humor.

A Russian claims to be the first inventor of a new kind of mathematics. The New Deal will sue for plagiarism.

Teaching Music.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In spite of not being a musician, I should be grateful if you would would allow me space to comment on the enlightening article by your music critic, Ray C. B. Brown, in The Post of May 23. His statement, "Every child should be taught to read musical notation as he is taught to read words," is a truism that, unfortunately, has failed to materialize.

And yet, Mr. Brown's desideratum could easily be brought about if the interval system of teaching music, which is the method used in solfeggio, were rationalized. But teachers are the last persons in the world to change their traditional ways, and in music they are apparently more hidebound than in other departments of human knowledge.

Some years ago a step forward was taken by the music publishing house of C. C. Birchard & Co., whose "Laurel" series are familiar to most public school children, when a new and rational method was introduced for building tonal awareness in the brain. In science, as we know, light and sound are closely related, and this easily demonstrable fact has been made the basis of a method for correlating the six primary and six secondary colors of the spectrum to the twelve tones of the chromatic scale. Selling Helium.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Government is contemplating the export of helium gas to Germany for the purpose of making lighter-than-air craft "safe." The idea being that such gas will only be used for passenger dirigibles. I question what action will be taken if, after the gas is exported, our Government finds that Germany is using it for purposes of war. Our Government can do nothing but refuse to sell any more gas, but that won't stop Germany from using the gas she already has for that purpose, will it? PEACEMAKER.

Roadside Beautification.

In starting this project, clumps of iris, daffodils, hollyhocks and old-fashioned lilies were planted along several miles of highway No. 7. More recently two wayside resting places have been established where motorists can pause to get the wonderful view and enjoy flowers that have been planted to cheer the passer-by.

On a recent Sunday afternoon (May 23), a woman was seen gathering an armful of iris bloom from these roadside beauty spots between Purcellville and Hamilton. She rode in a car with a District of Columbia license. She evidently was unaware that she was violating the law of the State and that had she been apprehended by an official she would have been liable to a fine. But she seemed also to be unaware of a higher law—that of regard for other people's right to enjoy the beautiful.

These flowers were not planted for any individual to gather and carry off, but for the enjoyment of all who might pass by.

An appeal is hereby made to all to refrain from picking not only these flowers but also the wild flowers and other blooms along the highway and in adjacent woods. Remember that others will pass this way and have a right to enjoy them.

Filipino On McNutt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Francis Burton Harrison and Frank Murphy did more than any other men to restore the respect of the Filipinos for the Americans. Harry B. Hawes did a tremendous lot toward pleasant relations. Many others have done their bit. Paul McNutt, if press reports are indicative, could easily undo the good feelings restored through years of patient effort. He could open up new wounds which would take many years to heal.

As a Filipino student partly educated in America, I would hate to see Filipino-American feelings roiled as the freedom date nears. I would hate to see bitter days like those when Leonard Wood, perhaps sincere at heart, rode high in full tilt and deeply wounded the pride of the Filipino people.

Civil Service Exams.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Emergency Worker" has said a mouthful in The Post of May 28! All of us who have taken and passed many varied examinations the past two years have wondered what it was all about.

I am registered on five civil service eligible lists. My ratings are good. I am a temporary employe. When I passed the statistical examination, I was elated. Only 3,000 out of about 50,000 in the whole country passed. This was a year and a half ago. Surely the Government had use for 3,000 statisticians—so thought I. Well, I received an appointment from this examination ($1,620 supposed minimum) as an under file clerk for Baltimore at $1,260 per year. Possibly this explains the reason for the recent statement which I saw in the newspapers that four out of five Security appointments had been turned down by appointees. Just about this time, too, quite a story appeared in the papers about the living conditions in Baltimore—how impossible it was to find decent quarters at moderate rates. Family men simply couldn't, even to get under Civil Service, accept $1,260 appointments, moving to another city.

Then, there was the comptometer examination. Hundreds of political appointments have been made since I passed that examination. Several weeks before the examination, I tried to rent a machine, as I have done no work of this kind for several years. Every available machine in the District of Columbia was rented by applicants! And for what purpose? I finally got the use of a calculator for $1 an hour. I wish I had bought my kiddies some shoes instead!

With "Emergency Worker," I, too, am wondering why the farce of announcing impending examinations, when it means nothing at all. The cost of giving these examinations is a tremendous Government expense.

Ford Unionization.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When collective bargainers picket a plant, beat up those who are not members of their organizations, usurp the property of their employers, commit sabotage to this property and otherwise conduct themselves as un-American not to mention ungentlemanly fashion, that is apparently all right. Public opinion seems to support this policy.

When noncollective bargainers protect their employer, beat up collective bargainers, run them off of property upon which they have no right and refuse to be coerced into an organization they care not for, that is apparently all wrong. Public opinion is against this policy.

I see no difference in methods. If Ford Company employes wish to join a union they have but to seek the union, just a little way off. I see no reason for the union descending upon Ford property, then complaining because they are run off.

And further, what is to be gained by unionizing Ford. Just to be able to tell him where to get off? Gone is the appreciation of years of higher wages. Gone is the appreciation of and the possibility of low-priced cars made by this great philanthropist.

MILLARD F. OTTMAN.

Mussolini And The Jews In Italy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The latest "master stroke" of Rome power is the issuance of a warning to Jews in Italy that they cease being identified with all that is appertaining to Jews and Judaism. Or, banishment will be their portion, and they will share the fate that overtook their forbears of Spain in 1492.

Settlement of Jews in Italy dates back to 200 B. C., and throughout the passing centuries theirs has been a brilliant record in scholarship, statecraft and industry, as well as in civic and military achievement.

Through cruel oppression, slaughter and forceful conversion they were reduced to the scant number of some 45,000 souls found in Italy today. These, too, are known to have rendered valiant service to the country in peace and in war. They owe nothing to Il Duce or King Victor Emmanuel beyond their loyalty as citizens or subjects. To demand their self-abrogation as an integral part of the Jewish race, their renouncement of the ancient faith and tradition is tantamount to an onslaught of old paganism, which has beaten itself and crashed against the Rock of Ages.

RABBI J. T. LOEB.

Washington, May 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The words of Mussolini concerning the Jews in Italy may become epoch-making, similar to President T. R. Roosevelt's "hyphenated Americans." The distinction between "Jews in Italy" and "Jews of Italy" enunciates a principle of far-reaching implications.

The man who claims citizenship protection under any one flag is bound by honor, not to say by religion, to be subject to the civil laws of the land over which the flag waves. If or when conscience is invaded under any citizenship to a point of impossible endurance, then a crisis arises which must be dealt with by the parties involved. But before an outside nation joins with the supposedly "persecuted" of another nation, justice demands that the nation complained against be fairly dealt with.

Because we as Americans overwhelmingly disapprove of Duce's invasion of Ethiopia and his attitude to the civil war in Spain, does not mean that unbiased people consider that everything which Mussolini says is opposed to reason or the public good. He rules Italy as Hitler rules Germany under dictatorship. The right or wrong of such a sort of government is not the question. Both Italy and Germany overwhelmingly hold to it for the time. We ourselves hear much concerning the "overwhelming vote" in our last Presidential election as a reason why certain powers should be granted our Chief Executive. But a dictator can not permit any contingent in his realm, or under the protection of his flag, to denounce the government and the personnel of another nation with which the dictator is in accord. Hence the words of Mussolini to the effect that no Italian citizen must hold up to ridicule the Nazi government of Germany is but speaking through the Jews of Italy to non-Jews as well. We in America have freedom of press and of speech—within limitations. Dictators are not so liberal. But the principle enunciated by Mussolini in this instance is a sound one. It may well apply to America as to Italy.

When an ecclesiastic representing one-fifth of the population of our country speaks with the authority of the great church behind him, ridiculing the rulep of a foreign nation with which we are on friendly terms, as being once a day-laborer, our American "tolerance" is stretched to the breaking point. Under such an indictment, what would Lincoln, Johnson and Garfield be? Well may we say to those who come to our country to dwell beneath the Stars and Stripes: "If you come to us, do not come as those who are merely in America, but as those who are of America."

J. O. KNOTT.

Diverting If Apocryphal

MARK TWAIN, who was always quick to expose persons who indulged in the writing of apocryphal history, was himself guilty on one occasion of one of the most interesting pieces of apocryphy. In "Following the Equator," he related the following incident which he said occurred in 1870 in Sydney, Australia:

The shark is the swiftest fish that swims, and the speed of the fastest steamer of the day was poor compared to his.

One day in 1870 a poverty-stricken young stranger, newly arrived at Sydney, asked to watch the line of a shark fisher, landed a huge, 19-foot specimen. There were two sources of revenue in the catching of sharks: The government paid a bounty on them; and the huge man-eating fish sometimes had valuable articles in their stomachs, which belonged to the fisher.

The stranger "robbed the stomach" of his shark, then turned to walk away, leaving the fisherman to collect the 80-shilling bounty.

"Well, this is odd," said the astonished fisherman. "The saying is that you mustn't judge a man by his clothes. Why yours look just ratty, and yet you must be rich."

"I am," said the stranger, who went straight to the office of the wealthiest wool-broker in Sydney. Having forced his way into the presence of that august individual he coolly proposed the latter lend him 100,000 pounds. The wool broker nearly fainted, but he had strength left to ask what this extraordinary individual proposed to do with so much money.

"To buy the Australian wool crop—deliverable in 60 days."

"Dear me, dear me!" cried the broker. "And if you had it what would you do with it?"

"I shall make 100,000 pounds for each of us in 60 days."

"How do you know?"

"Because France has declared war against Germany and wool has gone up 14 per cent in London and is still rising."

"Ah, now then I've got you," exclaimed the merchant. "The fastest ship in the service arrived last night, 50 days out of London. There are no war clouds anywhere, and as for wool it is the lowest-spirited commodity in Europe."

"I have later news."

The stranger then explained he had obtained a memorandum book, written in German, some buttons, and a copy of the London Times only ten days old from the stomach of the shark he had caught, apparently rolled in a tube or other non-digestible container. Its owner evidently had fallen overboard and been eaten by the shark. The deal went through, according to Mark Twain, and the stranger pocketed his first fortune.

He was Cecil Rhodes, later the great imperialist of South Africa. Twain's diverting story ignored the fact that Cecil Rhodes in 1870 was in Natal, Africa, and so far as the records show was never in Australia in his life.

(Kansas City Times.)

In connection with a recent large sale of Victorian books, a writer in the Times of London recalls a saying of Lord Morley to the effect that the people of Victorian England could be divided into those who kept a Tennyson on their shelves and those who did not.

There is certainly a modicum of truth in the epigram—although a glance at the second-hand bookshops today might lead one to suppose that those who didn't keep him on their shelves had him in their pockets. To display your Tennyson, then, to the stranger within your gates was to offer him a guarantee, recognized by everyone who was anyone, of your cultural integrity. The passage of time has, alas, deprived us of this easily applied cachet, for where is the author now whose name, unsupported, will thus serve as passport for us?

Shakespeare, in solitary grandeur, will hardly help us with the devoted followers of Mr. Bernard Shaw, who has long since put Shakespeare in his place. And even Mr. Shaw, after his effort to guide the Intelligent Woman, is suspect in some quarters. If we fly the banner of Kipling there will be those who will mark only its imperial purple, and eye us askance. Mr. H. G. Wells is so delightfully easy to read that the intellectuals might refuse him as a serious criterion.

The rule did not, however, apply with the Victorians, only to Tennyson and culture in a narrow literary sense. To be a gentleman "sans reproche" it was no less essential to keep a retinue of Standard Authors, than it was to keep a well-appointed stable. One cannot seriously regret the passing of such an outlook, and one suspects that the ubiquitous Tennyson often knew the indignity of uncut pages. At present, though we may not, perhaps, muster so many classic names on our shelves, we have not been pressed into collecting our books by any social convention, but have engaged with them more or less voluntarily—and one volunteer is worth three pressed men.

Income Tax Evasions.

RESENTING EVASIONS of the income tax law, both legal and illegal, Mr. Roosevelt will ask Congress to take steps, but it is very doubtful that the inquiry will result in the application of the law to all incomes from whatever source derived.

The millions of public employes, including the President himself, will continue to enjoy their immunities; labor unions will suffer no such prying inquiry as employers must endure, and religious organizations which frankly engage in propaganda, and otherwise attempt to influence legislation and thus the Government, will remain above a law which Congress passed but nobody in Washington has the temerity to enforce.

As a Federal employe at $75,000 a year the President, though a citizen of New York State, is exempt from a State income tax, which applies to his fellow-citizens of the State earning as little as $100 a month. Likewise exempt are all those Senators, Representatives, Federal judges, collectors, commissioners, marshals and miscellaneous high-salaried patriots in the national service who live in the 32 States having income taxes.

This exemption and, the reciprocal immunity of State, county and Federal employes from the Federal income tax rest upon decisions of the Supreme Court which seem to thwart the intention of the laws, but while the New Deal is in a mood to decry the judgment of the nine old men on certain matters, the Administration has been strangely acquiescent in this curious interpretation.

• • • •

LABOR UNIONS present a problem which would fascinate the Treasury and bring the catch-polls on the run with handcuffs clanking at their belts if the same income fell to other recipients. They keep their own secrets, however, although many of them are notoriously predatory and brutal toward their subjects, and a fine sense of political delicacy prevents any inquiry into the ultimate destination of millions of dollars in dues, fines and plain, undisguised tribute wrung from the pay envelopes of the forgotten man for whom such tender regard may sometimes be detected in the fireside chats of Mr. Big.

The dictators and grafters of organized labor long have plundered the forgotten man, who, in some cases, inquires into union money matters only at the risk of his livelihood or even his life, and for craft and arrogance they have nothing to learn from the soulless corporations in the neyday of the G. O. P.

But a labor dictator is a leader in a great, altruistic revolution, and it would be unwise to frisk him in the same way that the agents go through the utterly bad American citizen whose ownership of a tax-paying business is convincing proof of bad character and criminal intent.

In demanding more severe treatment of the tax evader Mr. Roosevelt will not call special attention to labor union income nor to that of institutions which accumulate enormous wealth, but give no assurance that the same is applied to religious purposes, and openly flout the clause against interference with the legislative function.

• • • •

LABOR, including the articulate members of the rank and file but not the sacred and docile members, would accuse the President of turning against the toiler, although such an inquiry would be plainly in their benefit. And, in religion, he would be denounced for a bigot, although it might interest him to know that some members of the clergy nowadays are recalling the course of events in France and Spain, and doubting that it is wise, after all, for religious institutions to grow too rich and withdraw too much wealth and property from the tax rolls, thus throwing the burden on the ordinary people of the community.

One year, early in the panic, Paul Gallico, single-handed, persuaded Herbert Hoover to knock together the heads of the commanding officers at Annapolis and West Point and make them ratify a football game for charity. Grover Whalen appeared as promoter, and the game raised $500,000 for the Salvation Army—a fund which in the box office of a private producer would have received the hearty attention of the Internal Revenue Department.

As a sports writer at the time I looked and looked for a detailed publication of the charitable application of this half-million, but never saw one, and I have often had an honest curiosity and the thought that the least the public deserved was a certified statement showing how much good the money did.

Such, nevertheless, are incomes from various sources derived and to unknown purposes applied, unless you take for granted much more than the Treasury is willing to concede in the affairs of ordinary men.

Pulitzer Prizes

By William Lyon Phelps.

1936 Winners.

Please remember that Pulitzer is pronounced Pullitzer, and not Pewlitzer.

These are the most important prizes in America and have done a great deal to stimulate interest in literature, drama, and journalism.

The awards this year have given general satisfaction. "Gone With the Wind" certainly deserved the prize, because it was not only the most popular, but the most significant novel of 1936. It is full of vitality and has re-created history.

"You Can't Take It With You" is a glorious comedy, full of excitement, full of laughter; everyone who sees it is charmed. It is a theatrical masterpiece; but it is something more than that. Spectators are not going to forget its philosophy. This is an entirely original play; and as other companies will be on the road, do not miss the opportunity if it comes in your neighborhood.

"The Flowering of New England," by Van Wyck Brooks, is a distinguished contribution both to American history and to the art of literary criticism. I should be glad to have this book be widely known in Great Britain, Canada, Australia, South Africa, and in all English-speaking countries. It is an honor to the United States to have produced so magnificent a work. And I think it is a sign of widespread intelligence that such a literary masterpiece should be a best-seller. Radio and motion-picture magnates, please take notice.

Robert Frost for the third time receives the Pulitzer Prize, and he will receive it a fourth and fifth time, unless other poets can surpass him. His latest book, "A Further Range," was prophetically christened.

Allan Nevins' book on Hamilton Fish I have not read yet, but I read his book on Cleveland. He deserved that prize, and undoubtedly this.

Two Miles Down

Too much cluttered with both politics and geology are those marvels which are Louisiana's oil wells. Usually we discuss them in prices of stock or barrels of flow, while the dwellers in oil regions speak a language as foreign as Hindu. "Screen was pulled after the well failed to flow, and the hole was underreamed in preparation for a drilling test," we read, and wonder if whatever it is varies inversely or directly with the square of the distance, or what color hat it wore last Friday morning.

Yet the quoted words are used to cloak one of the wonders of the world, a flowing and commercially productive well more than 2 miles deep, near Houma, whence our forebears obtained shellfish and vegetables and the like. Just 11,630 feet deep is that hole, and some 35,000,000 years old is the oil stratum, as geologists reckon such matters, though a few million years make little difference. But it is camparatively new land, since mammals already roamed the jungles, though man had not come to tame them.

'Hayashi Must Go!'

By Frank H. Hedges
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

GIVEN a humiliating defeat at the polls but refusing to acknowledge that defeat, the Hayashi ministry still clings to power in Japan, yet its days are numbered. Not unless it is willing and able to resort to the most drastic methods can it hope to last out the summer, for the people of Japan have spoken in no uncertain voice and have said, through the ballot box: "Hayashi must go!"

Even in Japan, where parliamentary politics are still very much in eclipse and where what the Japanese press calls the "unseen forces" are in control, the will of the people must sooner or later make itself felt. Now there comes, coupled with the public disapproval of the Hayashi government, a growing condemnation of it also among certain of these "unseen forces," which means that its fate is sealed.

Premier Seen Wrong In Designing Strategy.

ONLY LACK OF political experience and ignorance of the technique of political strategy can account for the belief which the premier held when he asked for a dissolution of the Diet on March 31. That inexplicable belief was that, during the short 30-day election campaign, he would be willing to bring into existence a strong rightist party which would capture a majority of the seats in the House of Representatives. It took about a fortnight for him to realize that this dream was destined to be unfulfilled.

No Japanese leader of ability was willing to head the movement for the creation of such a party and it faded for the time being, although the nature of the Japanese political scene is such that it is destined to come into being ere long. Its growth can be no 30 days of hothouse forcing, however.

Instead, therefore, of controlling the lower house, the premier finds that only about 50 of the members of the new Diet are supporters of the government. The two old-established parties, the Minseito and Seiyukai, returned 179 and 175 members, respectively, while Japan's principal labor party, the Shakhai Taishuto or Social Mass Party, increased its Diet delegation from 18 to 37. All three of these parties are violently anti-government, and among them they control 383 votes out of a total of 466 in the House of Representatives. A resolution of nonconfidence is certain to be introduced and overwhelmingly adopted if the Hayashi ministry stays in power long enough to meet the extraordinary session of the Diet which must constitutionally be called not later than August 31.

Government Explains Its Refusal To Resign.

THE GOVERNMENT explains its refusal to resign following its election defeat on the grounds that it had no party in the field and therefore has not been defeated at all. It goes on to contend that the party men do not understand the "emergency" in which Japan finds itself, and hence must be replaced by M. P.'s who do—in other words, by M. P.'s who think like Premier Hayashi and his bureaucratic, militaristic colleagues and friends.

All of this gives every indication that the premier is contemplating a second dissolution and a second general election when the vote of nonconfidence is introduced. That would be folly if he has any desire to preserve even the forms of parliamentary government, for the outcome of such a second election is even more certain than the one just held. The people at large, who do the voting, are feeling with increasing animosity that the premier is flouting the constitution, and they will not brook that if they can help themselves. Perhaps they cannot; that remains to be seen.

An even stronger factor pointing to the downfall of the present ministry before many weeks have passed is the growing dissatisfaction with Premier Hayashi and his methods among the privy councilors of Japan. The privy council, like the Supreme Court in the United States, is charged with the interpretation of the constitution in Japan, and is exceedingly jealous of this prerogative. Conservative to a degree, the councilors are adamant against change in any direction. They cling to the interpretations of Prince Ito and all the privy councilors who have succeeded him.

In 20s Privy Council Discouraged Democracy.

WHEN THE PARTIES were in power during the '20's this attitude of the privy council hampered them and prevented a more rapid growth of democratic government. Now that the executive branch of the Tokyo regime is of a pro-Fascist trend, the conservatism of the privy council threatens to act as a brake on that trend and to operate in favor of democracy. The councilors would keep the constitution and constitutional practices as they have been, and will endeavor to block any radical change either to right or left. The curious paradox is thus offered of a group of elderly and conservative bureaucrats barring the path toward Fascist teachings and operating, in fact although not in intention, in favor of the democratic form of government.

There are distinct murmurs against the present cabinet to be heard within the ranks of the "Younger Element" of the army as well. The premier does not go nearly as far to the right as they wish. He is too conciliatory to the parties and does not adopt the high-handed methods they favor. In consequence, there has begun to arise in these extremist military circles a demand that the army withdraw its support from the Hayashi ministry. If this be done, and if the privy council remain firm, the government will be left high and dry without any support at all. It long ago lost the support of the parties; is it now to lose also the support of the "unseen forces?"

Realizing that the privy council has it within its power to wreck the government overnight, the government has bowed to that group of 24 men and has altered some of its plans to accord with their demand. Chief of these is the Central Planning Board, originally designed as a sort of general staff to run the country as a super-government. This original idea has been somewhat modified as a result of privy council pressure, however. Other objections have been raised by those close advisers to the throne to certain government policies.

Hayashi Attempting To Outmaneuver Diet.

IT IS EVIDENT that, thwarted in his attempt to capture control of the Diet, Premier Hayashi is resorting to an ancient Japanese practice of governing the committee, so to speak. That is, he is now setting about the creation of various boards, bureaus and commissions which would be given such great powers as virtually to make the Diet a useless appendage to the machinery of state.

Here again he is forced to encounter tremendous and undoubtedly effective—ultimately, at least—resistance. This resistance will come from the people at large, from the political parties, from the privy council and quite likely from still other of the "unseen forces" in the empire.

It is impossible to believe that the Hayashi government can remain in power much longer. The cards are all stacked against it. When it falls, however, it is certain to be succeeded by another ministry of very much the same type. The new premier will probably be a retired army or navy officer, or perhaps a bureaucrat. Certainly he will not be a party leader, and the Minseito-Seiyukai combine will not be charged with the task of forming the next cabinet. Even the two parties themselves realize this. They realize that neither they as parties nor the state of public opinion in Japan is yet ready to return to the party form of government, and they will make no serious effort to achieve such a goal at this time.

What will they do—and the chances are for their success—will be to demand that the next government co-operate with the political parties as parties. They will demand at least one seat, probably two each, in the succeeding cabinet, as the price for which they will give an appreciable degree of support to that cabinet. It will not be much progress for them, but it will be better than the intolerable situation in which they find themselves today.

Yukon Floods Maroon Alaskans in Cemetery

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 30 (AP).—Residents of Mulato, on the isolated lower Yukon River, pitched tents in a graveyard today and waited anxiously for a drop of flood waters, which stood 5 to 10 feet deep in the streets. Mulato citizens, including children at a small native mission school, fled to the hills when the Yukon went out of its banks last week and spread over lowlands.

150 Years Ago

From The Christian Science Monitor

Madison's Insight.

"CAN IT BE supposed that this vast country, including the Western territory, will 150 years hence remain one nation?" This incredulous question burst from the lips of one of the delegates during the very convention that framed the Constitution whose 150th anniversary the United States this year will celebrate.

It is indeed a rare document that can survive a century and a half as the frame of government for a nation so extensive, so populous and so dynamic as the United States. The fabric woven in the Convention of 1787, broadened by the Bill of Rights and subsequent amendments, has caught the winds of many kinds of popular sentiment and fancy, and it has sailed the ship of state through eras of expansion and threatened division, of prosperity and distress, of reforming zeal and of complacency, of perils at home and abroad.

• • • •

EVEN THE MEMBER whose foresight could not envisage in 1787 a Constitution lasting 150 years, nevertheless contributed to it some of the sound qualities which have made it endure that long. He was Nathaniel Gorham, of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee of the whole during the early part of the convention, author of the six-year term with biennial rotation for Senators and of payment from the National Treasury instead of State treasuries for members of Congress.

The incident arose when James Madison objected to a proposed permanent rule of one Representative in the Lower House for each 40,000 of population. That would make a House of more than 3,000 Representatives today. Mr. Gorham protested the Government would not last long enough to produce such an effect.

But James Madison was much more sanguine—and as events have proved, more realistic. He had ventured earlier in the convention that they were "digesting a plan which in its operation would decide forever the fate of republican government," and said, "In framing a system which we wish to last for ages, we should not lose sight of the changes which ages will produce."

• • • •

MADISON'S INSIGHT as a young student of political history (he was then 36) into what these changes would be is now extremely interesting if not prophetic. He reasoned that

An increase of population will of necessity increase the proportion of those who will labor under all the hardships of life and secretly sigh for a more equal distribution of its blessings. These may in time outnumber those who are placed above the feelings of indigence. According to the equal laws of suffrage, the power will slide into the hands of the former. No agrarian attempts have yet been made in this country, but symptoms of a leveling spirit have sufficiently appeared in certain quarters to give notice of the future danger.

Though enough of a Democrat to become later a follower of Jefferson, Madison recognized that, as is fundamental in the Bill of Rights, minorities have some rights of which they should not be deprived even by majorities. To safeguard the just interests of property, though not its preponderance in the Government, he wished the Senate to be a body "respectable for its wisdom and virtue" and its members secure in the tenure of a nine-year term.

• • • •

SUBSEQUENT developments have made the Senate a more popular body by the substitution of direct election in place of election by State Legislatures. In making this substitution the people were exercising their right of amendment of the Constitution under its own terms, a right which they may be more and more urged to utilize as the Nation draws further from the times and conditions in which the Constitution was drawn.

Washington placed great reliance on this provision for amendment. After the convention he acknowledged in a letter to his nephew that the Constitution was not free from unavoidable imperfections and said,

As there is a constitutional door open for it, I think the people (for it is with them to judge) can, as they will have the advantage of experience on their side, decide with as much propriety on the alterations and amendments which are necessary, as ourselves.

He added the significant words, "The power under the Constitution will always be in the people." To keep that power, the people must use it with judgment, and will be aided in that judgment by an acquaintance with the aims of the Nation's founders.

"Yeah. It's been a busy week. Wasn't it wonderful how they opened telephone service between America and China with that conversation between Justice Van Devanter and President Roosevelt?"

"Wonders will never cease. Still, I suppose a conversation between those two would sound better that way. Who do you think will be named to the Supreme Court?"

"I think Carl Hubbell is in the lead, but there is so much fighting over it that Ford Frick had to slap fines of $50 on a couple of candidates."

"Wasn't Joe Robinson mentioned?"

"Yes, but I understand the President insists on screwball pitching."

"What do you think of the ducal wedding?"

"I'm glad the British sit-down strike against it didn't break it up. I see it's going to be private with nobody present except a few thousand photographers."

"Have you been reading of the C. I. O. fight on Henry Ford?"

"Only that it all started because the umpire called a balk."

"Oh, the one that's to race Vanderbilt's War Admiral?"

"That's the one."

Sad Prospect.

Gov. Lehman has signed a bill making it legal to sell beer from pushcarts in New York City. Somehow or other nothing startles us more than the idea of mother telling little Ignatz to go out among the pushcarts and see "if you can find your old man."

Daggers Drawn is among the 2-year-olds racing this year and Elmer Twitchell assumes he is always sharp and ready.

Maybe in the row between Mr. Lewis and Henry Ford the question whether a body squeak comes under interstate commerce will come up.

Hitler Cancels Navy's Leaves; Bomb Toll 23

5 Warships at Kiel.

German warships still anchored in Kiel Harbor early today included the Admiral Graf Spee, sister ship of the Deutschland, and the cruisers Karlsruhe, Leipzig, Koeln and Nuernberg.

Aroused, grief-stricken and indignant over the bombing, millions of Germans tensely awaited word from Chancellor Hitler.

The chancellor conferred upwards of five hours with his leading government chiefs before the public was informed the government had decided to "take measures."

What these "measures" might be was not disclosed in the communique nor would any official indicate their nature or when the government planned to execute them.

The communique stated, however, the "measures" would be communicated to the non-intervention committee in London. An official commented that this group thus would be the first to receive the information and the details might be published first in London.

Joint Italo-German Action.

Rumors that the first retaliatory move might be a joint Italo-German naval demonstration off the Spanish coast lacked confirmation, but it was believed generally that joint Italo-German action of some kind was inevitable since Italy also mourns a number of dead, killed in a similar attack.

Morning newspapers without exception appeared heavily bordered with black, and banner lines violently denounced the attack on the warship as criminal provocation.

Chancellor Hitler's paper, Voelkischer Beobachter, in its streamer called the attackers "Bolshevist air pirates."

All papers emphasized that the bombs dropped on the pocket battleship were a blow struck at the non-intervention committee and all nations taking part in the international patrol of Spanish waters.

Spanish government airplanes attacked the vessel yesterday afternoon. The Spanish ministry of defense in its original statement described the bombed warship as the Admiral Scheer, a sister ship of the Deutschland.

"Bolshevist" Attackers.

The German government issued a communique which read:

"An unheard of, scarcely imaginable case—Spanish Bolshevist airplanes without any excuse bombard a German warship lying off the Spanish coast. Twenty-three German sailors died the death of heroes. The German government issues the following statement relative to this incident:

"After (the incident) a few days ago when Red (Spanish government) airplanes bombed English, German and Italian ships lying in a harbor of Mallorca and thereby killed six officers on an Italian ship, German ships were forbidden to anchor further in this harbor.

"On Saturday, May 29, the armored cruiser Deutschland lay at anchor off Ibiza. The ship belonged to those vessels designated the international sea patrol. Nevertheless, between 6 and 7 o'clock in the evening, the armored cruiser suddenly was attacked with bombs, two airplanes of the Red Valencia government swooping down upon it."

23 Killed, 73 Wounded.

"Inasmuch as the ship quietly was lying at anchor, the crew was in an unarmored quarter forward. One of these bombs struck—somewhat as in the case of the Italian ship, which was hit in the officers' mess—in the crew messroom. Twenty-three dead and 73 wounded were the result of this criminal attack.

"A second bomb struck the deck, but caused only minor damage. The ship, which was perfectly capable of navigation and combat after the bombing, steered for Gibraltar in order to land the wounded there.

"The ship did not fire a single shot at the airplanes.

"Inasmuch as the Red Valencia government twice was warned by the nonintervention committee and the German government against further attack of ships in the service of the international patrol, this new criminal onslaught on a German ship compels the German government to take measures which it will without delay communicate to the noninterventoin committee.

Word of the bombing reached Chancellor Hitler in Munich while he was opening an agricultural show.

A dispatch was handed to him in the midst of the inauguration ceremonies in the main hall. He immediately conferred with Baron Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, who had just arrived. Admiral Erich Raeder, chief of the admiralty, arrived later by special airplane.

Col. Gen. Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's right-hand man, arrived here by special plane at 8 p. m. from a Hitler youth meeting at Weimar. He quickly joined his colleagues in the chancellery.

The official death list showed all who died aboard the Deutschland were regular sailors, with no officers.

Plan Strong Protest.

(Valencia reported two government planes bombed the German warship Saturday at Ibiza, insurgent-held port in the Balearic Islands, after the ship had turned her antiaircraft guns on them.

(Both the Deutschland and the Admiral Scheer are 10,000-ton vessels.)

Berlin Excited.

Excitement spread through Berlin late in the afternoon as rumors of the bombing spread. No newspaper had carried a word on the incident up to 9 p. m. tonight.

(The Deutschland, first of three warships of the so-called Deutschland class which includes the Admiral Scheer and the Admiral Graf Spee, was launched May 19, 1931.

(She is 593 feet long at the water line and her normal complement is 926 men. Her armament includes six 11-inch guns, eight 5.9-inch, 14 antiaircraft guns, 10 machine guns and eight 21-inch torpedo tubes.)

Hitler, Duce Waging Spanish War, Norman Thomas Asserts

U. S. Socialist Leader, in Paris After Stay in Barcelona, Valencia, Says Air Attack Under German, Italian Control.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 30.—Norman Thomas, American Socialist leader, declared today that Reichsfeuhrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini are waging war "with particular frightfulness" on the Spanish people "in a struggle which they themselves secretly fomented."

Thomas, three-time Socialist candidate for the Presidency of the United States, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas, arrived in Paris after spending some time in Barcelona and Valencia on a visit to government-held Spain.

He asserted the insurgent air bombardment of Valencia Friday, which occurred while he and Mrs. Thomas were there, was "an act of war by German and Italian fliers under the direct control of their governments."

"Almost certainly their base of operations is the Island of Majorca, which now is in Italian hands," he said.

Thomas charged that while Hitler and Mussolini "wage this war their representatives sit on the so-called nonintervention committee and their navies patrol the Mediterranean coast on which both of the principal cities of loyalist Spain (Valencia and Barcelona) are located.

"The world, all too familiar with hypocrisy, has scarcely seen anything equal to this performance in shameless effrontery to which the governments of Great Britain and France apparently have given tacit approval.

"It should be observed that these bombardments serve no primary military purpose. Women and children are the chief sufferers. I saw devastation of the working class quarter at Barcelona and can testify that its principal effect was not to weaken morale but to increase bitterness and hate to a degree that might given even Hitler, Mussolini and insurgent Gen. Franco reason to fear for the future.

"We were impressed with the morale of the people, their order, discipline and general confidence in the justice of the Spanish cause and its ultimate triumph. It has only been German and Italian intervention which made and is making a long war out of what would have been a short, unsuccessful revolt."

his battleships to fire without warning on any loyalist airplanes that threaten them in Mediterranean waters.

Berlin, Rome Confer.

Il Duce, it was reported, has announced that he will not bother to protest to the nonintervention committee in the future but will leave it to his warships to protect the Italian tri-color "anywhere at any time."

Mussolini's defiant attitude, revealed in orders to Admiral Marenco di Moriondo, commanding the Italian squadron in Spanish waters, were said to have resulted from loyalist air attacks on Italian warships at Palma, Majorca, last week.

It was reported early today that Stewart Brown, United Press correspondent in Rome, that Italy and Germany might act in concert in warning the nonintervention committee that unless loyalist air attacks on German and Italian warships cease at once more Fascist warships will be sent into Spanish waters.

The additional ships, it was said, would serve as "escorts" for the Italian and German ships already there.

Italian newspapers described the air raid on Palma as "premeditated and cold-blooded."

Throughout Sunday, it was reported, Berlin and Rome were in consultation over action to be taken before the nonintervention committee.

Whatever the form of the protest or threat, it was certain that efforts to "quarantine" the Spanish conflict and obtain the withdrawal of all foreign volunteers has been given a staggering—or perhaps even a knockout—blow by the bombing of the Deutschland.

Deutschland at Gibraltar.

Gibraltar, May 30 (AP).—Twenty wounded German sailors were rushed to a military hospital here tonight as the German pocket battleship, bombed Saturday by Spanish airplanes, slipped into this port with her flag at half-mast.

Twenty-three coffins were ordered for the men killed in the raid, but the full casualty list was not announced here as officers and members of the crew of the warship were kept from going ashore.

Surgeon Hans Kallfelz, attached to the Admiral Scheer, sister ship of the Deutschland, which went to the assistance of the bombed vessel, said:

"The whole thing was most disastrous. I cannot say more.

"When the Admiral Scheer was informed of the tragedy, we immediately proceeded to the assistance of the Deutschland, where I helped to treat the wounded with the Deutschland's doctor.

One source said one of the bombs which struck the pocket battleship pierced the deck and exploded inside, killing 18 and wounding 12 seriously. Another missile fell on the foredeck, killing four sailors.

All those killed were young, unmarried sailors.

All British and other ships in the harbor lowered their flags to half-staff as the Deutschland entered the harbor.

Cornell Purchases Farm for Breeding Nervous Wrecks

Ithaca, N. Y., May 30 (AP).—Cornell University today announced purchase of a 100-acre farm to raise "heebie jeebies," its population to be Achilles, the pig, who has a nervous breakdown, Homer, the goat, who has one, too, and a flock of other animals, who will imitate man's artificial civilization to discover the cause and cure of nerves, psychoses and delinquency.

Achilles and Homer broke down trying to eat under the annoying etiquette imposed by an electric buzzer.

The farm will make it possible to test the effects of heredity, now the No. 1 suspect in the "heebie jeebie" world. There for the first time will be bred generations of animals with nerves which can stand the gaff, and others which cannot.

By comparing the two kinds of nerve tissue, it is hoped to discover the secret of the kind that stands the stress of life.

Galdacano, a key to the last line defenses of the besieged city.

Stiff Basque resistance blocked the insurgent drive and held up other onslaughts at Munguia, northeast of Bilbao, and at Orduna, 22 miles southwest of the capital.

Basques admitted the situation was "serious, but not desperate."

Insurgent air raids, in which 100 planes have taken part, made the pressure on the defense even greater.

Fifty Spanish government planes were destroyed today when insurgent aviators bombed the Albericia airdrome near Santander, insurgents announced. Three government planes were reported shot down in a battle over Santander as the insurgent craft roared down on the government stronghold west of Bilbao on the Bay of Biscay.

Italy to Back Reich.

Rome (Monday), May 31 (AP).—Italy will support Germany before the 27-nation nonintervention committee in demanding satisfaction for the bombing of the pocket battleship Deutschland, well-informed sources said tonight.

No confirmation could be found for a report that the two nations would make a joint protest. It was felt here, however, that vigorous protests of Count Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to Britain, already had established Italy's position in regard to bombing of warships participating in the international patrol of Spanish waters.

Unwed Teachers Suffer, Says Head Of Lovers Church

Oklahoma City, May 30 (AP).—Enforced spinsterhood was described to Lovers Church members today as the "burglar peeking out from under the bed of tens of thousands of women teachers in the country."

"Love is the great law in teaching," asserted Dr. W. A. McKeever, psycholobist and founder of the church, as he decried a ban which he said existed in many cities against the marriage of teachers.

Dr. McKeever started the Lovers Church to combine romance and religion.

"There is no great teacher but that he or she is in love with somebody," he told his audience.

A. F. L. Radio Men Finally Quit Liner

New York, May 30 (AP).—Fifteen hours after they barricaded themselves in the wireless room of the liner Oriente, forcing cancellation of the ship's passenger trip, three American of Federation of Labor radio operators walked off the vessel today and it sailed for Havana carrying crew and freight.

The men imprisoned themselves to prevent replacement by operators of the rival C. I. O. union, which the rest of the crew demanded.

Three members of the C. I. O. Radio Telegraphists Association were hustled aboard.

Oil Strikers' Demands 'Absurd,' Say Employers

Mexico City, May 30 (AP).—Negotiations to settle Mexico's Nationwide oil strike collapsed today despite an assertion by President Lazaro Cardenas that it should end "without further delay today." Employers withdrew from an arbitration conference, describing a new list of workers' demands as "absurd and impossible."

Miss Jackson, Mr. Garvan Are Engaged

Announcement Finally Proves Truth of Long-Current Rumors.

Father of Bride-to-Be Formerly Held High Democratic Post.

A rumor current for several months in New York, Boston and Washington has at last become fact, with the announcement by Mr. Robert Jackson, of Concord, N. H., and this city, of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Hope Jackson, to Mr. Francis Patrick Garvan, jr. The bridegroom-to-be is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan, of Roslyn, Long Island.

Ever since friends of the good-looking Miss Jackson noticed last winter she was wearing a star sapphire on the third finger of her left hand, there have been rumors she would marry Mr. Garvan.

Her father came to Washington in the early days of the New Deal, and still maintains law offices here. He was formerly Secretary of the Democratic National Committee. Miss Jackson is a sister of Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, whose late husband was treasurer of that committee until he resigned shortly before his death in April to go into private industry.

Attended Sarah Lawrence.

The bride-to-be graduated from Miss May's school in Boston and later attended Sarah Lawrence College. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James R. Jackson, of Littleton, N. H., and the late Mr. and Mrs. Oliver E. Branch, of Manchester, N. H. Through her mother, the late Mrs. Dorothy Branch Jackson, she is descended from Charles Chauncey, second president of Harvard University, and Israel Chauncey, co-founder with Elihu Yale of Yale University.

Mr. Garvan was graduated from Hotchkiss School in 1931 and from Yale in 1935. He was manager of the football team at the university in his senior year, and was a member of the Fence Club and Wolf's Head Society. His other clubs include the Racquet and Yale Clubs of New York and the University Club of Washington.

Entertained Lavishly.

Miss Jackson's family took a leading part in Washington society until the death of Mr. Morgan. During the winter of 1935-1936 they occupied the famous "pink palace," Massachusetts avenue home of Mr. Hugh D. Auchincloss, which was built by Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolfe, of London, when she was the wife of Sylvanus Stokes. They entertained lavishly here, one of their parties being a masquerade ball at which official and diplomatic society were represented as well as several of Mr. Jackson's friends from Hollywood's movie colony. The late Mr. Morgan and Mrs. Morgan entertained at a large dance shortly before his death in honor of the former Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. James Gerard.

Miss Jackson is at present with her sister, Mrs. Morgan, at the Long Island estate of Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, which they leased for the summer. No date has been set for the wedding.

Crittenton Mission Conference Opens

Delegates Are Entertained at a Buffet Supper by Founder's Daughter.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

DELEGATES from all parts of the country gathered in Alexandria yesterday for the opening of the national conference of the Florence Crittenton Mission. Following memorial services in St. Paul's Church to the late Charles N. Crittenton and Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, founders of the organization, Dr. Barrett's daughter, Mrs. Reba Barrett Smith, entertained the visitors at a buffet supper at her mother's home, 408 Duke street.

Dr. Howard Kelly, Baltimore surgeon, spoke at the services, paying tribute to Mr. Crittenton and Dr. Barrett, both of whom he knew.

Dr. Barrett was a resident of Alexandria for 30 years and her home, a picturesque place which dates back to Colonial days, was a gathering place for persons from all over the world, who shared her interest in social work and went there to confer with her. She was active not only in the Florence Crittenton Mission, of which she was head for so many years, but also in the American Legion Auxiliary, of which she was the second national president, and in the Daughters of the American Revolution, which she served as State president for eight years. Her daughter, Mrs. Smith, is following in her steps as general superintendent of the Florence Crittenton Mission.

Preserved as Memorial.

Her home, which her daughter and family now occupy, is kept just as she left it, as a memorial to her. There is friendliness and hospitality in every room and all the furnishings have a story connected with them. In one downstairs room are teakwood chairs and cabinets, beautifully carved, which were given Dr. Barrett following the San Francisco World's Fair, where she had been instrumental in opening a building for Chinese and Japanese girls. On the buffet in the dining room is a handsome silver service, plates and goblets, inscribed to her as the gift of the American Legion Auxiliary when she was president at the time of its convention in San Francisco, October, 1925.

In the library upstairs are countless things which attest the gratitude and recognition her work brought to her. The room which she used as her office, extends across the front of the house, with a large fireplace at one end and a stained glass window beside it, the central design of which is a cross. Low bookcases are built in around the walls and comfortable chairs and couches lend a homelike atmosphere.

The house is "home" to her children and their families as it was during her lifetime, and it is destined to become a shrine for those carrying on her work.

Next door her son, Dr. Robert Barrett, president of the National Florence Crittenton Mission, and Mrs. Barrett live. They recently gave it might have been 100 years ago. The guests, after being served, went into the garden, where chairs and tables had been arranged under the trees, or to the porch, where the trellis and a little fountain suggested it too was part of the out-of-doors. After dark, colored lights came on overhead and there was a program of spirituals, sung by a colored quartet.

Mrs. Smith was assisted in the dining room by Mrs. W. A. Brown, Mrs. Earl English, Mrs. John Umhau, Mrs. R. F. Mancill, Miss Charlotte Beaufort and by her sister, Mrs. Edward Alfriend.

Receiving with her were Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, president of the board of the Washington Home; Mrs. W. E. F. Taylor, of the Baltimore home; Mrs. Earl Collier, of Nashville, Tenn., national extension director, and Mrs. Robert Heffner, of Los Angeles.

Among the guests was Mrs. Dora Shaw Hefiner, of Los Angeles, a member of the natoinal board, who came from Indianapolis, where she attended the National Conference on Social Work, just closed. Mr. C. T. Nicholson, national treasurer, and Mrs. Nicholson also were present. Mrs. R. T. Kendall, president of the board of the home in Jackson, Mich., was there with 14 other of her board members. Among them were Miss Winifred Seckinger, superintendent of the home; Mrs. Helen Breed, a case worker; Mrs. N. C. Lyon, vice president of the board, and Mrs. Carl Winters, chairman of education. They made the trip by motor.

There was also a group from Norfolk, including Miss Clara E. Marshall, superintendent of the home; Miss Ruth Carpenter, Mrs. Ben Fowler and Mrs. A. R. Thrasher. Mrs. Rex Hatfield, of Sioux City, Iowa, was another of the visitors, accompanied by Mrs. Edwin M. Brown, of Washington, formerly of Sioux City.

The George Mason Hotel is headquarters for the convention, which will continue through Wednesday. The guests will be entertained at supper this evening at the Florence Crittenton home in Washington; tomorrow Mrs. Smith will be hostess at luncheon to all superintendents, and in the evening there will be a dinner at the George Mason Hotel, at which Judge Edwin M. Curran will speak on "Crime and Justice." The delegates will be received at the White House Wednesday morning and will be entertained at high tea at Ivakota Farm in the afternoon. Thursday the delegates have been invited to a luncheon at the Florence Crittenton Home in Baltimore.

One of the Fort Myer performers which will be watched with interest is Sandy, which was badly injured last winter in a collision with an automobile and which, it was feared for a long period, might lose the sight of one eye. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Is Faced With Alternatives of Leaving Home or Giving Up Her New Beau; She Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20 and for the past three months I have been constantly beaued by a man of 26. We care for each other a very great deal and plan to be married as soon as it is financially possible. My mother does not seem to care for him, and although I've asked the opinions of my employer and my friends, I can find no reason why this should be. Every evening when I come in at all late there is a great deal of comment by the whole family. There are constant arguments about how often I see him and the hours we keep.

* * * *

At first I let all this talk pass over my head, thinking they were trying to get my goat. But lately my mother has been insinuating that I am doing some deep wrong to the family. She calls me a black sheep and says I'm on my way to the devil. As I am doing no wrong, I feel that I shouldn't have to stand for this kind of talk and the constant arguments are wearing my nerves threadbare.

* * * *

The other day mother told me that if my actions continued I would have to leave home. I would hate to do this, but my mental state is such that my work is suffering and I must do something soon to remedy the situation. I know my family wishes me to break off with this man, for they think I am too young to have a serious suitor. But I can't give him up. We care too much for each other. What should I do?

PERPLEXED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Since you are rather young and haven't known the young man very long, I suggest you attempt a compromise with your family for another six months at least. Explain the situation to your beau (if he doesn't already understand it) and make a pact to see each other less often (say, three nights a week) and to be home by 11 o'clock on evenings you are out together. This is indisputable proof to the world and to your family that you are not headstrong, defiant and unruly young persons; that your regard for each other can accept discipline and meet the acid test of adjustment to inimical circumstances.

* * * *

I think it regrettable that you should have to regulate what should be a more or less spontaneous program of coming-and-goings only in order to placate an unreasonable mother and a nagging family, but nevertheless I think it should be done to prove that your very intentions, as well as your actions, are above reproach.

* * * *

If, after making this concession, your family continues to criticize, condemn and threaten, I think you should give serious consideration to leaving home. It is almost better to have no parent than to live with a parent who unscrupulously uses figurative blackjacks to secure a son's or daughter's complete subjugation. Such a parent has no decent, enlightened, helpful concern in his offspring's welfare. He is consumed by an almost diseased desire to possess and dominate.

* * * *

If your beau is a decent, manly fellow of average intelligence, there is no reason why you should break off your friendship with him. It is most unfair of your family to expect or demand that you choose a beau to suit their taste rather than your own. M. H.

Stenographer's Problem.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Is it wrong for a stenographer to accept money from her boss when he gives it to her to get herself a personal gift?

* * * *

DEAR STENOGRAPHER: It depends entirely on the motive which prompts the gift whether or not it is wrong to accept it. If it represents professional appreciation of hard, special or overtime work well and cheerfully done by an employe whose salary the boss hasn't the influence to elevate, then I suppose it is all right to accept it. It is conceivable that an executive might wish to express impersonal good will toward or sincere appreciation of a woman employe's services, without having the faintest idea what to give her. He might decide that a small cash donation was a brilliant solution of the problem. His intentions would be of the very best, and, being of the best, it would definitely be less than gracious for the party of the second part to reject his clumsily kind offering.

* * * *

On the other hand, however, a stenographer should reject, with pleasant but positive phrases, any gift from her "boss" which seems to imply that he hopes this little token may mark the beginning of a closer friendship and more intimate understanding. And I am sure any stenographer would know in a split-second just which of the two ideas the "boss" had in mind. M. H.

Fashion Now Sponsors Cotton for Summer Chic

These sketches give an idea of the variety of texture and pattern available in the new cottons. Prints large and small, brilliant and subdued, lead the summer cotton parade. In sheer organza, batiste and voile, through piques, novelty weaves and ginghams, the newest cottons go to dances, the beach, shopping and the office.

Cottons Available for All Wear; Are Chic in Variety of Colors

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THIS is National Cotton Week and with the new cottons smarter in color design and styling than ever before, you can really live in cottons from dawn to dawn, with the assurance there is nothing smarter. Whether you lead an urban existence or spend your summer at the shore, cottons are available to lend chic and comfort in numerous interpretations.

Cottons have gained a new social status this summer and are styled in the same manner as the more expensive silks, satins and brocades. Moreover, the materials themselves are of tremendous importance. Vivid colors, new pastels in sophisticated tones, woolen tints reproduced in cottons—all these add interest to the cotton color chart. The patterns are unusually interesting and a definite departure from the former conventional designs.

Prints, dots, plaids, stripes and checks, as well as alluring solid color tones, play stellar roles in this new cotton drama. The Far East contributes its patterns and lovely colors; the Tyrol, Spain England, Dalmatia, the Riviera, and the Pan-American Exposition all have a share in this summer's cotton parade. The popularity of trailer traveling has opened a new field and there are prints and materials especially planned for this great American fad.

Cottons this summer are as practical as they are smart and different. Special manufacturing and chemical processes make them nonshrinkable, crush-resistant, water repellent, air-conditioned and permanently finished so as to make starching unnecessary. The current cottons are also so well made and the fabrics so endurable that they will be wearable both as to styling and material for the entire summer season.

Black and White Popular.

In spite of the fact that vivid color is rampant in the cotton style picture, black and white, it is predicted, will lead all of the gay and subtle color tones. For daytime or evening, formal or sports attire, dramatic black and white is so popular that it really headlines the entire summer fashion scene. It is equally appropriate for debutante daughter and grandmother.

Not only are frocks and suits in cottons appearing everywhere this summer, but accessories have taken a cue and are also much in evidence, in diverse cotton interpretations. Cotton hats, gloves, shoes, scarfs, kerchiefs for the head, handbags, and even costume jewelry have made their appearance to accent the gala 1937 cotton season.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By
Dr. Logan Clendening.

First Aid in Injury.

Suppose you were out camping, and in walking through the woods you come on one of the members of your party stretched out on the ground. You want to know what's the matter with him but he is stunned and cannot tell you. What are you going to do,

Put this paper down a minute and see what kind of an answer you give to the question.

Any doctor, I think, would answer it by saying he would like to find out his general condition. Let the particular injury go for a minute until you find out how sick he is. He may have sunstroke, or he may have stumbled and hit his head so that he has concussion, or he may have broken a bone and fainted, or eaten something that disagreed with him or poisoned him and keeled him over, but all these can wait until you find out how sick he really is.

It will only take a minute, and you can tell by ticking five signs off on your hand. Five signs, one for each finger and thumb.

First, consciousness. We have pictured a case where consciousness is partially lost. If consciousness is present you can find out the trouble, but that should not stop you from making the four other examinations for the general condition.

Second, color. You can tell that in a flash. You know from experience how instinctively you judge that someone you know, who has just been hurt, is pretty sick by the pallor of his face. A splendid sign then of general condition—the absence or presence of shock.

Third, the breathing. The respirations should be about 15 to the minute and effortless.

Fourth, the pulse. This takes most of the time. The rate should be 70-80 a minute, full and regular.

Fifth, temperature. You do not need a thermometer. We assume you are not carrying one around with you in the woods. But your own temperature is normal and you can tell comparatively whether the patient is flushed and feverish, which may be fever, or sunstroke; or cold and clammy.

There are two general groups of cases in which these signs are changed from normal. One is in depressed conditions—due to shock from pain, fainting, exhaustion, injury to an extremity, or hemorrhage. The consciousness is dulled or incoherent, may be completely absent. The color is pale. The breathing is shallow and rapid—20-25 a minute. The pulse is weak, thready and rapid—80 to 130 a minute. The temperature is low; the skin is clammy and moist.

Women Adopting Studs for Clothes

Hollywood.—Big, brightly enamelled or jewelled studs are being lifted from the masculine wardrobe to be used in pace of buttons on women's summer clothes. Being detachable, they are a boon to lovely washable frocks which are just now making their appearance.

Orry-Kelly did a frock for Anita Louise which utilizes the new stud motif. Of heavy chalky crepe, the dress has a short flared skirt and tight bodice which is fastened from throat to waistline with studs the size of a quarter of silver and peacock blue enamle.

Metal and glass rings are also helping to crowd buttons off many a spring ensemble. Frieda Inescort makes use of crystal rings on a dress of heavy gray sheer by spacing six of them down the front of he waist, posing one on each shoulder close to the neckline and another in center back next to the neck opening. Then she runs a printed crepe scarf through the rings, down the front to trail almost to the hem of her frock. The matching figured band on her hat also goes through a series of crystal rings.

Manners for Good Times

YOU WANT to have a good time when you go places. It's more fun if you know what to do and say, no matter where you are.

When traveling, should you chat with the young man near you? Yes—if he's interested and you feel like talking. Only keep the chat impersonal—about weather, scenery, news of the day, movies, books. And don't let him pay for your meals.

Which fork do you use—when? No man wants to risk taking a girl to dinner if her lack of manners embarrasses him. So remember, at a properly set table, the fork you use first is the one farthest from the plate. The number of forks depends on the menu. At a formal dinner, usually you'll find first, fish or entree fork, then dinner fork, and next to the plate, salad fork.

At the movies, who goes down the aisle first, man or girl? If the usher leads, the girl precedes the man. If there's no usher in sight, she follows the man. Leaving, the girl walks up the aisle first.

Learn ABC's of etiquette, practice until they're second nature. When your mind is free from worries you'll really have fun. Our 40-page booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR EVERY DAY, tells you what to do at your "public appearances"—at dances, theaters, home and restaurant dinners, all social occasions.

Send 15c for our booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR EVERY DAY, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

THIS June's bride should wear something old and something new to the altar by all means—and even something borrowed if she must be literal. But she might save the "something blue" for the theme of the bedroom in the new home. Because men like blue rooms—remember when the most romantic song a young swain could croon into the ears of his lady love had words that said something about a "blue room far away upstairs."

tiny white floral pattern in it, with woodwork painted this same ice blue. The draperies could be white glazed chintz with mulberry red ball fringe for a finish. The dressing table could also have a white chintz skirt with ball fringe for trimming, and a pair of slipper chairs might be slip covered in a mulberry and white fringed chintz. (Use that fine vibrant shade of Palace mulberry that's come "in" with the Williamsburg, Va., restorations.)

Cherry would be nice for the furniture in this room—in a pleasantly colonial design. And on the bed a quilted spread made of the mulberry and white chintz . . . have it just big enough to fall about four inches over the sides of the bed to overlap a flounce of white pleated chintz. A deep blue bedroom rug would be a satisfying finish for the room, yet inexpensive. Lamps in pale blue and white and accessories in blue porcelain for accent.

That's a bride's room that even the groom could feel at home in, yet it has allure, too, for all its simplicity.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the writer's new bulletin "Where to Place Furniture—and Why." This bulletin is four pages long and illustrated with diagrams of pleasant room arrangements. An especially nice help for a bride eager to make the most of her new home.

The GENTLER SEX

Garden Pilgrimage.

"My DEAR! Have you seen the wistaria? . . . You don't mean to tell me you haven't seen the WISTARIA! It's positively the most marvelous thing you ever saw in your LIFE! You know wistaria's really my favorite—— Say, isn't that Maud Beetle over there? . . . I suppose you've heard? . . . Oh, yes, everybody says it's really true. And he's got a wife and FOUR children, mind you—FOUR CHILDREN! What on earth she wants with a man with four children—— Oh, how do you do Mrs. Goocher? We were just saying how perfectly beautiful the wistaria was.

"The snapdragons? . . . Yes, aren't they simply ADORABLE! I do believe snapdragons are my favorite flower. They have so much personality. You know I was just telling Mrs. Blink she has positively the most unusual garden of any on the tour. I do think it's so wonderful of people who have money to spend it this way . . . especially since they made it in fertilizer—— Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Bopp? Won't you join us? We were just going to wander in the garden.

"What! . . . A for-get-me-not bed! . . . You don't mean it!. I'm simply MAD about for-get-me-nots. Simply MAD. Aren't the snowballs lovely? They have so much personality—you know I DO wish Daisy Mutton would do something about her chin—and the dear little pansies! Aren't they the sweetest things!

"I WISH you would look at that MARVELOUS boxwood. They say it's over 100 years old . . . Yes, it came from the old Dizzard estate in England—you know all my people go back to the Dizzards. That's one reason I've always been so crazy about boxwood.

"How do you do Mrs. Gadd? . . . . . Yes, we just came from the Popinjay garden—did you EVER see anything like those Chinese roses? I just told Mrs. Popinjay I thought she had positively the most unusual garden—isn't that Mrs. Frowsey? . . . Did you know she won a prize with her peonies? . . . Well they say she simply LIVES in her garden since he started running 'round——

"Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Frowsey? . . . I was just telling about your marvelous peonies. You know I'm simply DYING to take up gardening. I do think it does something to you . . . getting so close to the earth and everything.

"The boxwood? . . . Yes, did you know it was 200 years old? . . . Yes, and it came from the same place as my people—— Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Nertz? Wouldn't you like to wander in the garden with us?

"Isn't it wonderful to feel the earth under your feet—don't you love these darling old flagstones . . . and those quaint little cinder paths? Say, hasn't Mabel Clack taken on some weight? . . . What was I saying? Oh, yes, about all of us keeping our feet on the ground—— Oh, my DEAR! I wish you would look at that iris bed! I simply can't stand it. It's TOO beautiful!

"I wonder what iris that is . . . it looks like the Plicata . . . though now it might be the Xiphium hybridum—isn't that Stella Oxley over there? . . . I thought I recognized that dress. Why on EARTH will she wear those big prints?

"How I do LOVE flowers? . . . How do you do, Mrs. Birdsong? . . . Yes, we flower lovers are always meeting up . . . Yes, isn't it all too beautiful?

"My, hasn't she broken in the last year! . . . Say, just look at those GORGEOUS poppies! You know there's something about being in a garden that's so spiritually uplifting. You feel so CLEAN—— Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Bunch? We were just going to see the vista over the basin. Won't you join us? . . . Oh, I'm so sorry . . . Yes, I'm glad to have seen YOU.

"My DEAR! Did you see that HAT? . . . With the streamer down the back! . . . And a woman of her age! . . . And size—— I WISH you would look at that lily pool . . . It's TOO beautiful. Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Otter? . . . Yes, this is my fifth tour this week . . . You know, if I could just LIVE in a garden—yes, so glad to have seen you.

"Now why on EARTH will people wear those peasant styles? . . . Especially if they're a little ordinary themselves—I wish you'd look at Nancy Wiggle . . . She WOULD have a man in tow—— Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Zipper? . . . Did you ever see so much beauty? . . . I was just saying that if people could only LIVE in a place like this what WOULD they grow to?

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 30.

AND THIS is the end of New York's loveliest month. Saving, perhaps, October. In those two brief periods I seriously doubt that there is a city in the world which is as exciting and beautiful as ours.

ALICE HUGHES.

In May the New Yorker bursts out of her cocoon and almost becomes a warm, friendly human being. Her face loses the winter's worry-lines; she smiles with the weather, and seems to thrill to the beauty of Fifth avenue at its flood tide. There is this brief period of spiritual warmth—and then the incredible heat of our summer arrives, and it is over.

At this time of year one of my favorite ports of call is Upper Broadway, from the seventies to the nineties—far different from the street in the theater district. Up there the human race has a chance. The adjoining side streets pour their humanity into Broadway, a town in itself, and it is always possible to see babies by the score, a Gotham rarity.

Upper Broadway on a sunny morning is a comforting spectacle—mothers and infants shopping, gossiping, strolling. In the center of the highway is a tree-lawn with benches, where the old folks just doze the day away, chatting idly with acquaintances, or just napping in the sunshine. The sidewalks are crowded with young mothers, visiting their favorite delicatessen stores or beauty parlos and trading hints on baby-culture. Now, with the arrival of June, this town-within-a-town will move to the beaches of the Long Island shore—and Manhattan Island will again be delivered to the furrowed brow. But May—this year and every year—has been grand!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Harriet Hoctor, the lovely ballerina whose most recent appearance was in the Astaire-Rogers charmer, "Shall We Dance," is on her way home to us after a stay in Chicago. But yesterday she spent visiting in her native bailiwick, which is the fine old town of Hoosick Falls, N. Y. And I'll bet Mother Hoctor had a fine chicken on the table for her lovely daughter!

* * * *

I said good-by to Claire Booth Brokaw Luce, author of "The Women," who is on her way to a well-deserved holiday in Hawaii. Comrade Luce, who is the publisher of Time et al., was with the lovely and clever Claire, and so was her daughter Ann Brokaw . . .

* * * *

This is the time of year when every school picks its girl Most Likely to Succeed, and so on, but I think our New York University takes the cake, plus icing, by choosing "The Most Exquisite Coed." That's a swell adjective. This year the honor was bestowed upon Shirley Densen, a mere freshman in the School of Commerce. Good gracious! With this honor coming to La Shirley when a mere frosh, what will the girl be in her senior year? Seems to me though the U will have to dig up a new adjective, and can they top "exquisite?" I doubt it . . .

Well, next fall you will see another thrilling spectacle show at the marvelous Center Theater in Rockefeller Center. The new one is to be called "Virginia," and will be set in Williamsburg, the historic capital recently restored by Rockefeller gold. Arthur Schwartz is writing the music, and the brilliant Laurence Stallings, of "What Price Glory" fame, is doing the book. And I'll venture that it will be a grand show.

On the subject of the theater, there is a new hit in town that you will want to see. It is called "Excursion" . . . And there is yet another, "Room Service," which will run through the summer. So it will be a pretty good June, July, August after all!

* * * *

Already the fur dealers are snooping about the market, preparing for the big August sales. They calculate that the favorite pelts, come late summer, will be Persian lamb, coney, Hudson seal, caracul, kidskin and mink, and that they will be the biggest sellers, in the order named. And I'm sorry to be forced to report that prices will be somewhat up. But that, thank Heaven, is a future worry!

Metal Leaf Jewelry Matches Gloves, Bags

Paris (AP).—Metal leaf jewelry, enameled to match gloves and handbags in red, blue, brown or green, is shown here. There are new rhinestone designs in flower formations, and bracelets and brooches made of pastel colored beads, with a bright little flower in each one.

Wooden costume jewelry is increasingly popular, and the colors run riot. The wooden beads that make floral designs come in such color combinations as red, blue and yellow, with green leaves, or three shades of purple.

'Lost Horizon' Enters Its Final National Week

By Nelson B. Bell.

Entering the third week of its "road show" engagement in the National Capital, "Lost Horizon" yesterday inaugurated the final week of the most successful season the National Theater has enjoyed in the last decade.

This pretentious picturization of James Hilton's novel—is a film of magnitude and interest. It strays occasionally from a strict adherence to the best practices of effective drama, but it still compiles a sufficient score of impressive qualities to justify its removal, for the time being, from the regular "program" scheduled of releases announced by Columbia Pictures.

Revolutionary Scenes.

Beginning with scenes of turbulent action and revolution and an airplane kidnaping, the narrative then, along about the third reel, I should say, gets into the philosophical discussions for which it evidently was principally devised. Action slows down here and the picture, at times, becomes simply the medium for the delivery of some very long and very idealistic speeches.

Then, at the end, there comes another splurge of exciting action—this time on the snow-covered slopes of the high Himalayas. There is romance and adventure in the story, to be sure. My only quarrel with it is that it does not blend these elements into a completely compelling and convincing recital of human courage and devotion.

Magnificent Photography.

Frank Capra has done an admirable job of direction—as he always does—in the various segments of his story. He has contrived, for example, to film one of the most realistic airplane crashes ever seen upon the screen. In some of the scenes at Shangri-La, on the other hand, he has permitted his drama to lag almost to the point of stagnation.

His cast is incomparably fine. Ronald Colman, in the stellar role, plays with his accustomed repression and consequent forcefulness; Jane Wyatt, as the heroine, does what little she has to do extremely well and two exceptional character studies are offered by Sam Jaffe, High Lama, and H. B. Warner, in the equally picturesque role of his chief disciple.

Those in supporting roles contribute no less effectively to the impressiveness of a subject that has been magnificently photographed.

Belasco.

The Belasco Theater this week brings back—in fact, it brought it back last Saturday—that most provocative of foreign-made films known in this country by the title of "Carnival in Flanders" and on the other side as "La Kermesse Heroique." It stands among the best of the European productions to reach this country within the year and has enjoyed a profitable run on Lafayette Square during an earlier booking.

The story is that hilarious, but distinctly sexy, recital of what happened in Holland in the seventeenth century, when an invading conqueror drove all of the men to cover and the women finally decided to see what they could do about it. It is a comedy rich in humor and travesty and is especially well acted by a cast whose names mean little to the American public.

Plan Worked Twice.

It was the idea of the distaff portion of the Flanders population that if they could distract the minds of the able gentlemen who were invading their land, and more particularly their town, from the notion of conquest and substitute romance for ravage and rapine that all might in the end be well. This is not too far remote from the basic idea of Robert Emmett Sherwood's "The Road to Rome," in which Jane Cowl appeared with such signal success. The plan worked admirably in both instances.

There is not an overplusage of delicacy in "Carnival in Flanders," but there is originality of treatment that lifts it well above the ordinary level of camera farces. It was directed by Jacques Feyder, a native of Brussels and, to date, is his most imposing work for the cameras.

The bill is completed by the customary list of short subjects and a new release of the picturized news events. It is recommended to sophisticated tastes, able to "take it" and not of the conviction that seventeenth century Holland was totally decadent.

Rialto

In the annals of the motion picture, few directors have contributed more to the advancement of the cinematographic art than has David Wark Griffith.

How "Abraham Lincoln" compares with the earlier Griffith productions is of small moment beside the greater significance of the biographical presentation. Of the martyred President there have been few superior presentations than this, and with Walter Huston in the title role little can be desired for a comprehensive and authentic delineation.

Nor can one find fault with the performance of Una Merkel, as Ann Rutledge, from the effect of whose early and untimely death Lincoln never fully recovered; of Kay Hammond, as Mary Todd, who finally became the First Lady of the Land; or Ian Keith, as Assassin John Wilkes Booth; of Hobart Bosworth, as Gen. Robert E. Lee, or Henry B. ("Little Colonel") Walthall, as Col. Marchall.

In narrative accuracy, in pictorial beauty, and in histrionic performance, "Abraham Lincoln" makes an admirable and entirely worthwhile contribution to the Memorial Day season.

The cofeature of the week is "The Call of the Wild," a picturization of Jack London's world widely read story of the north country, Starring Clark Gable and Loretta Young, supported by a distinguished company including Reginald Owen, Sidney Toler, Jack Oakie and Frank Conroy.

Scientific Air-Conditioning Insures Patron Comfort In Practically All Local Theaters Through Summer

Now a Part of Standard Equipment, Cooling Plants Have Been Installed in All Newly Built Houses and Added to Many of the Old; New Film Opens at RKO-Keith's on Wednesday; Marsha Hunt in Town; Notes of the Current Theaters.

IT was only a few years ago that the coming of the warm weather—and the weather gets warm in Washington, the Chamber of Commerce to the contrary, notwithstanding—presented the year's worst bugaboo to the managers of the Capital's theaters. All that has been reversed now through the agency of scientific air-conditioning, which makes the theaters the coolest and most comfortable spots that can be found during the heated term, unless one chooses to live his life under a cold shower.

BELL.

For a considerable period of time, only the larger downtown houses were able to boast this luxury of washed, refrigerated and circulated fresh air, "15 degrees cooler than the street." Now virtually all of the heavily patronized playhouses in the District, both midcity and neighborhood, are equipped with the same facilities for assuring the comfort of the customer.

It is interesting to note in this connection that 11 of the Warner Brothers houses will be modernly air-conditioned this summer. All of the new additions to the chain had these plants built in as an integral part of their architectural structure. In many of the others, conditioning systems either already have been installed or are in process of installation at the present time. Among these latter picture theaters are included the Colony, at Georgia avenue and Farragut street northwest; the Avalon, at Connecticut avenue and McKinley street northwest, and the Central on Ninth street.

Owing to the huge demand for air-conditioning these latter days, the manufacturers have been swamped with orders and cannot turn out their product with sufficient speed to meet the demand.

Nevertheless, the Rialto has been able to secure equipment and will remain open all summer for the first time in several years on the assumption that the York system will mark the difference between comfort and suffocation.

The new houses and, I think, most of the older ones, operated by Sidney Lust also refrigerate their air and provide further escapes from the heat when the thermometer climbs up around 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

I have no statistical data from which may be culled the complete roster of Washington theaters that provide cooled interiors for their patrons, but the number is surprisingly large in proportion to the total number of houses operating in the District.

Incidentally, speaking of the Warner Brothers string of cinemagogues, special holiday matinees will be held today in all of the theaters on the wheel. Special attractions have been booked to insure a high measure of entertainment for those who wish to seek their diversion indoors, instead of in the open.

• • • •

Since this seems to be more or less a hot weather column, it might be remarked at this juncture that with the coming of warm days, the Arts Club program committee, which always has its eye out for seasonable and refreshing entertainment, has decided that what its audiences need is a light and hilarious musical comedy.

Pursuant to this thought they have arranged to have "The Ring of the Niebelungs" presented in the garden of the club on Thursday, June 3. This is the rollicking parody on the Wagner "Ring Operas" that Ben Smart and Elizabeth Sypher wrote—with lyrics by Hollis Schreiber—and which was presented with such success at the Sylvan Studios in Virginia in the middle of May.

The unusual response to the Potomac River Line announcement of the opening trip of the season to Colonial Beach yesterday has caused the management to schedule another trip to the popular river resort today. The steamer Potomac will leave its wharf at 9 a. m., and will return at 7:30. There will be music for free dancing. The boat is at the beach sufficiently long to permit ample time for salt-water bathing, fishing and picnicking.

The new Gene Raymond-Ann Sothern costarring screen vehicle, "There Goes My Girl," will open at RKO-Keith's Theater on Wednesday of this week. This is the fourth subject in which these two have appeared together. Ann Sothern will be remembered by many seasoned Washington theatergoers as the sprightly young woman who appeared on the stage of the National Theater a few years back in "America's Sweetheart," a musical comedy, in which the hit tune was "I've Got Five Dollars." Jack White played opposite.

"There Goes My Girl" is reported to mark a considerable departure from their usual styles by Miss Sothern and the platinum Mr. Raymond in that it goes tensely dramatic at times and makes no pretense to sticking to a light and frivolous plot. One is given to believe that it is a newspaper story that they have here, both being feature writers on a big paper. Well, we shall see.

• • • •

Comes a letter all the way from San Diego, Calif., from Earl R. Hunt, father of one of the cinema's most promising young actresses, which reads in part as follows: "Remembering your friendly interest in Marsha at the time of her Washington visits in December and January, I thought you might like to know that she will be arriving at the Mayflower about tomorrow for a stay of a couple of weeks. This is in connection with the new picture, 'Annapolis Salute,' for which RKO-Radio has borrowed her from Paramount and on which they have some two weeks' shooting on location at Annapolis. James Ellison plays the other lead." I suspect then that Marsha will be among the guests at the supper party being given Director Christy Cabanne and his associates on the picture tomorrow night. I hope so.

The Pierce Hall Players will bring their season to a close with the presentation of Philip Barry's play of "Holiday" tomorrow and Wednesday nights. The drama will be presented in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, each night at 8:30.

Little Film Table

On this occasion it is difficult to write a critical review of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," which opened yesterday at the Little Theater, without adding further wear to the adjectives that have become well worn in their employment on this Alexandria Korda production.

Only the highest praise can be given the direction of Alexander Korda and the magnificent acting of Charles Laughton, who here clinched his claim to the title of England's greatest character actor.

With its deliciously snappy passages, the film shows the private life of Henry VIII and five of the six spouses, the court intrigues, the jealousies, the last of Anne Boleyn, the coming—and going—of Anne of Cleves, beautiful Catherine Howard and, finally Catherine Parr.

Above the more or less historically accurate story is the amazing performance of Charles Laughton, who literally lives Henry VIII, and who renders a portrayal that is little short of astounding. His rage, his whirlwind moods and amorous adventures are put before us as if we were really looking upon the much married monarch.

The rest of the cast also gives brilliant performances.

Short in length, but long in documentary importance, is "War's End," which shows who was where and how they got there on the Western Front in the climactic engagements of the World War. It was compiled by Col. Thomas J. Dickson, A. E. F.

The other subject of the program is the tenth issue of "The March of Time."

Cumberland, Md., May 30.—The Western Maryland Railway furloughed a number of men at the Ridgeley shops yesterday, principally in the car-building department. Reports were that orders for a number of new cars had been filled, necessitating the layoff.

Latest for Pools and Beaches

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, May 30.—Memories that bless and burn: When Ramon Novarro said, with utter amazement in his voice: "Last year they paid me $11,000 a week; now they don't want me at any price!" When waiters at the old Vernon Club fought to serve Roscoe Arbuckle, who always left $20 tips. When I escorted Su-zanne Coral to a premiere the night after her secret marriage to Nick Stuart (it was a decoy to fool reporters). When heads of studios told Walt Disney, then trying to peddle Mickey Mouse, "The public won't accept a rat as a hero."

GLORIA SWANSON.

When Gloria Swanson, delighted with a young man's suggestion that she title her picture "What a Widow," sent him a Rolls Royce (the young man was Leslie Howard). When Carole Lombard swapped eight silver loving cups (dance trophies) for an evening dress to wear as a dress extra. When Boris Karloff, then a truck driver, gave a lift to a hitch-hiking extra named Walter Brennan. When the Marx Brothers ganged on Producer B. P. Schulberg and removed the gentleman's trousers.

When Marie Dressler, ignored by the movies, begged for a small part in a local stage show in order to eat (she was "discovered" in that part). When Robert Taylor in his first interview said, "Give me $200 a week and I'll be satisfied." When Tully Marshall secretly replaced Lionel Barrymore in a local play while Lionel was ill, and it was three days before a drama critic spotted the hoax. When old-time cameramen, remembering William S. Hart's former hospitality, photographed him with empty cameras rather than embarrass him by not shooting at all.

It was cute the other day, when a popular child actress from Mexico City visited the Shirley Temple set. The two children had no knowledge of each other's language, so they could not converse. Came time for the visitor to depart, and Shirley, as she shook her guest's hand, sprang her surprise (her one Mexican word): "Adios," she said proudly. At which the other child lifted her chin and answered (probably her one English word): "Hello!"

Now that she is in the profession, Katharine De Mille says she likes movie acting, but there was a time when she wanted any career other than pictures. "I became an actress because I couldn't help myself," Katharine told me one day. "At school I had to take part in every class play, because I was the daughter of C. C. De Mille. I decided I'd have to go through life doing the same thing—so why not get money for it."

I thing it interesting that the late Will Rogers still vies with current stars in the amount of fan mail received. Every week several hundred requests come for his photographs. Much of this mail is from foreign countries, where Rogers' pictures are now being shown. The rest comes from American admirers who appeal to the studio for pictures of their unforgotten favorite.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Covering Honors.

The so-called simple plays at Bridge are not really so simple after all. It is to be feared that players are too complacent about their knowledge of "elementary principles." Take the case of covering or not covering an honor. Here is a proposition that seems simple but which in reality causes an untold number of "swings" from victory to defeat. Let us examine a typical situation and analyze the whys and wherefores of covering versus not covering.

Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

With West making the normal opening of the Queen of clubs, a count of tricks discloses that declarer's contract is probably assured with the successful spade finesse. Since dummy has the Jack and ten, it does not matter whether East covers the Jack, when led, or not—declarer must make three spade tricks.

Considering the matter from East's position, there is no point in covering the Jack. Regardless of the respective spade holdings of declarer and West, East can tell that nothing can be gained by covering, whereas something might be lost. Of course, East cannot count declarer's tricks in the other suits and, therefore, cannot tell how many spade tricks are needed for the contract's fulfillment. Declarer's spade holding might be A x x, which would leave the Queen with West. Should East cover the Jack, the Ace would win and a low spade toward the ten would produce another trick for declarer. Failure to cover the Jack (if West held the Queen) would hold declarer to one spade trick. The Jack would lose to West's Queen and East's King-9 would remain tenaced over dummy's 10-2.

Now, let us change dummy's holding, which is the only hand other than his own that East can see, to J-7-2. Declarer enters dummy with a heart and leads the Jack. Do you see what a different proposition East faces now? He no longer can see the ten-spot and it is not at all improbable that that valuable card lies with West. If declarer has it with the Ace and Queen, nothing is either lost or gained by covering—declarer has three spade tricks in any event.

There is another reason for covering, however. Declarer might hold the A-10-3 opposite dummy's J-7-2. If East covers the Jack, forcing declarer's Ace, West's Queen in conjunction with East's remaining 9-8 form a tenace over declarer's ten-spot and he can never make more than one spade trick. If East fails to cover under such circumstances, West's Queen must win the Jack and declarer's A-10 remains tenaced over East's King.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

FEATURE STORY: A few days before Hauptmann's execution, Sam Leibowitz, who was retained at the last minute, grilled him for 18 hours, in the death-cell . . . It was a thorough grilling—interspersed with dramatic openings of the peep-hole through which could be seen the instrument board in back of the electric chair. Hauptmann was on the verge of breaking a number of times. But each time he recovered suddenly—as if he had been fortified by some strange secret he knew. That secret now is revealed in the testimony at the Parker trials in Jersey . . . the testimony that Ellis Parker, sr., ostensibly acting for the Governor, had assured him that the kidnaper—another person—would be brought forth.

• • • •

HEALTH DEPARTMENT: While the front pages are being devoted to the Ellis Parker trials, Ed Reilly—who defended Hauptmann—is ailing more seriously now. Reilly's intimates confided last night that they had received word that the once-famous criminal lawyer is not expected to live through the summer.

• • • •

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Enzo Fiermonte, who married the former Mrs. Astor Dick, passed by the French Casino one night this week and waved to Harry Goldberg, the doorman, there. A friend of Goldberg's standing nearby was very much surprised, and asked how he—a doorman—happened to know such a prominent socialite like Fiermonte . . . "Oh, Enzo's an old friend of mine," Goldberg explained. "I once knocked him out in three rounds at the St. Nick's Palace!"

• • • •

MOVIE DEPARTMENT: Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks dined at Myron Selznick'h home. Fairbanks, who still feels his screen popularity among the kiddie trade, was most cordial when he was introduced to Selznick's young daughter. He patted her head and asked, knowingly, "Is there anything you'd like to see me do?" The youngster suggested that he leap over three chairs. Fairbanks obliged. He was asked to do it again—and then, still anxious to please a fan, repeated the feat a third time . . . The youngster turned to Selznick. "That's wonderful, daddy," she gushed. "Is there anything else he can do?"

• • • •

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: For the first time in the history of the modern orchestra business, a lady will manage the destines of a popular orchestra. The orchestra is that of Paul Whiteman. The new manager is his wife, the former Margaret Livingston.

• • • •

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT: Brick Owens, the umpire, was hooted by the Boston fans this week for calling some decisions which seemed to be raw ones. Long after the hooting had quieted down one fan—seated nearest Owens—kept on shouting: "Rob-ber! Throw the ump out! He's blind! Whoooo!—Rob-ber!" The heckler was Fred Finklehoffe, co-author of "Brother Rat," who just had come to Boston in connection with the local road company of his play . . . After the game, Finklehoffe returned to the theater to examine the publicity accorded his play. The last entry in the scrap-book was a huge clipping which appeared in all the papers. It showed a photo of Brick Owens, and the quote: "His Decision Is—that 'Brother Rat' is the greatest comedy he's ever seen!"

• • • •

RESORT DEPARTMENT: Abe Greenspan, who owns the Hilltop Rest in the Catskills, is proud of the fact that his social directors of last season now are prospering on Broadway. His new brochure therefore contains these inducements: "Come to this place—where the Catskills meet the Hudson—where society meets society—where youth meets romance, and where Oshins met Lessy!"

• • • •

SOCIAL NOTES: A New York blueblood opened a charge account at the Stork Club Monday evening. The next day he was notified that the account had been canceled . . . He had discovered at his table one of the stamped souvenir postcards, which he addressed to a friend. The message he had written was: "We're at the Stork Club now, celebrating our new charge account—which I don't expect to pay!"

• • • •

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: At 3 a. m. yesterday a group of bored celebrants sat in the Tavern wondering what next to do for excitement. "I'll tell you what," Paul Stewart proposed. "Let's all wait up—to go to Dickie Wells's!"

• • • •

Chauffeur Is Accused Of Employer's Death

Atlanta, May 30 (AP).—Detectives assembled evidence today which they said indicated Milton Jackson, colored chauffeur, killed Mrs. Adele Fluker and fired her suburban home in a dispute over wages of $1.50.

County Patrolman Jack Carroll quoted the squat, 26-year-old Jackson as saying, "I'm sorry I did it."

He was arrested in the Flukers' new motor car on a downtown street last night two hours after firemen, summoned by a neighbor, found the charred and beaten body of Mrs. Fluker, 50, the wife of a machinery salesman, in her kitchen pantry.

New Mexico Relieved As High Water Recedes

Roswell, N. Mex., May 30 (AP).—Flood water receded from Roswell today and residents turned to the work of rehabilitation as clearing skies heralded the end of damaging flood in New Mexico.

On the Air

Radio broadcasting again illustrates its singular versatility as an entertainment medium today when the networks give us a little of everything—from the thrills of the 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis Speedway to the pontifical voice of Pope Pius XI in a message of greeting and papal benediction on the occasion of his eightieth birthday.

WMAL, WOL and WJSV will provide the descriptoins of the major auto racing classic of the American season. (Note time table for periods.) As one thoroughly familiar with this brick-track thriller for many years, I note with interest that much more attention has been given the event this year by the radio industry than any previous year.

The Pope's voice will be heard from the Vatican at noon, WMAL and WJSV. Following his message, N. B. C. turns to the fourth liturgical musical demonstration of the Diocese of Newark for mass celebration.

At other times throughout the day these features will be presented:

Suburban Handicap—From Belmont, with Bryan Field announcing, WOL, at 3.

"Knock Knock"—Irving Place, one of the last stands of "little old New York," is scene of "Let's Visit," WOL, at 7:30.

"Pick and Pat"—Are beginning third year for Columbia, WJSV, at 7:30. (They claim 1,500 gags in this period and never a duplication.)

Richard Crooks — In farewell concert, WRC, at 7:30. Margaret Speaks will continue through summer months, with Alfred Wallenstein conducting.

Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur in a radio version of "The Plainsman," WJSV, at 8, "Radio Theater." Sidney Skolsky will be interviewed.

Kate Smith—Guests in Dick Himber's program, WMAL, at 9:30.

* * * *

Columbia inaugurates another new series of weekly programs tonight at 9:30. Carl Carmer, author and story-teller, will present a program of folk lore and fancy, titled "Your Neck o' the Woods." Max Wylie, producer of the series, promises that Carmer's half-hours will do for the radio audience what his books, "Stars Fell on Alabama" and "Listen for a Lonesome Drum," have done for the reading public—provide the truest and most authentic sort of Americana. A different section of the country will be used as a setting each week. His stories will be real and imaginary. The opening story deals with the Ohio River valley. A small orchestra and men's chorus is in support.

* * * *

Here and there: "Lorenzo Jones," the new comedy serial at WRC, is to be presented five times weekly, beginning this week . . . Jane Pickens, N. B. C., soprano, has received her third successive Juilliard Institute fellowship and now is a member of the most advanced group of voice students, ready for opera study . . . Fred Allen's protege, Jimmy Blair, barytone, has been signed to share the vocal spotlight with Trudy Wood in the series under Johnny Green's direction, replacing Fred Astaire's hour for the summer. Blair, only 21, won a prize in Allen's show last February. When it was all over and he had won, Blair admitted to Allen that his grandfather had given the comedian one of his first jobs, years ago, in Boston. It was in the Boston Public Library. He's been singing with Carl Hoff's orchestra.

Finding of Letters Spurs Plane Hunt

Salt Lake City, May 30.—Reports of a strong new clue to the possible whereabouts of an airplane and its seven occupants, missing five months, stirred the search anew tonight.

The reports were denied by officialsof Western Air Express, owner of the transport that disappeared last December 15.

The Associated Press was told on good authority that one or more yellowed letters, their addresses obliterated but with postmarks reported definitely those of mail carried by the Los Angeles-to-Salt Lake craft, were found by a farmer.

Leonardtown, Md., May 30 (AP).—Miss Margaret McPheeters, nutrition specialist, will address the Pomonkey Home-Makers Club Thursday. She also will give a demonstration in canning.

Cranston, R. I., May 30 (U.P.).—Four escaped men inmates of the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane here tonight were believed surrounded by a cordon of State and local police in the densely wooded Hill's Grove section of nearby Warwick.

The four men, one of whom was described as "dangerous," were lodged in the same ward and escaped after they attacked and overcame three guards.

Dr. Seth Howes, superintendent, gave their names as Frank Barry, 46; Arthur Rumrilard, 30; Austin Robey, 25, and Armando Ceci, 39.

National Operating Rate Is Down 16½ Points as Result of Strikes.

Cleveland, May 30.—Closing of several steel plants by strikes in the Youngstown, Cleveland and Chicago districts has thrown the market into confusion, production and deliveries being stopped to a sufficient degree to cause apprehension among consumers supplied from affected mills, says Steel.

Strikes closing some plants at Cleveland, Youngstown and Chicago brought a sharp recession of operating rate down 16½ points to 75 per cent. Youngstown dropped 50 points to 30 per cent, Chicago 10 to 75 per cent, Cleveland 17 points to 65 per cent. Other declines in rate included Pittsburgh, 2 points down to 94 per cent; Eastern Pennsylvania, off 1 point to 72½; Detroit off 5 points to 95, and New England off 45 points to 55 per cent. Wheeling gained 2 points to 96 per cent and Buffalo 3 points to 91 per cent. No change was made at St. Louis, 94, Cincinnati, 90, and Birmingham, 83.

A close estimate indicates that buying during May was close to 75 per cent of the April volume, which is sufficient to keep mills busy for some time when added to the extensive backlogs already on books. Some lessening of demand, due to impending model changes in automobiles, is felt as partsmakers reach the end of their orders for 1937 models. In spite of the gradual decline in buying, the situation is said to be better than for the corresponding season since 1929.

Automobile production continues at a high rate, only slightly under the record established a few weeks ago. Last week 134,940 units were made, compared with 134,500 the preceding week. General Motors raised its figure nearly 500, while Ford and Chrysler fell off somewhat. The smaller car builders increased their output considerably.

In scrap the situation is clouded by effects of suspensions due to strikes. Dealers in many cases were caught unawares with cars in transit, and are faced with the problem of diverting them. Indications are that the market has come close to the low of the current decline and is scraping bottom. At the moment so many uncertainties face the market that the situation is largely nominal.

While no announcement has been made by pig iron producers of a price for third-quarter delivery, it is believed present prices will be reaffirmed for that delivery. Books are expected to be opened within a few days. Export inquiry continues but in smaller tonnages, most being for foundry grades.

Railroad buying has entered a quiet period after the heavy placing of cars, locomotives and rails in earlier months. Steelmakers have large tonnages on books for equipment now on order from car builders. Inquiries for freight cars are appearing and further buying is expected within a few weeks.

A decline of 29 cents is registered in the steel and iron scrap composite, bringing it to $17.60, practically the level of the last week in December and the first week in January. This was brought about largely by weakness in the East. The iron and steel composite lost 8 cents to $39.89, through scrap reductions. The finished steel composite is unchanged at $61.70.

Gas Companies Plan Advertising Campaign

Chicago, May 30.—Plans for the expenditure of $500,000 for co-operative advertising for the second year of a three-year national advertising campaign were ratified here today by the American Gas Association, T. J. Strickler, chairman of the committee to conduct national advertising, announced.

He said the campaign will follow generally along the same lines as last year and that the industry will again employ national advertising backed up by sales promotion and supported by newspaper tie-in campaigns placed by local gas companies throughout the United States.

New York, May 30.—Revenues for the transit industry for the week ended May 22, based on telegraphic reports received from a representative group of transit operating companies, showed a moderate increase over last year.

Transit Journal's Revenue Indicator stands at 103.73, which represents a gain of 3.73 per cent over the corresponding week in 1936. For the week ended May 15, 1937, the Indicator was 103.53.

$600,000 Air Orders Reported by Lycoming

Williamsport, Pa., May 30.—Lycoming division of the Aviation Manufacturing Corporation announced today that unfilled orders on hand for Lycoming radial aircraft engines and Lycoming controllable propellers amounted to over $600,000.

About half of these orders are for the U. S. Army and Navy and the remainder for private concerns.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift in Dull Week, but Industrial News Holds Good.

New York, May 30.—Lacking even the excitement of wide price swings financial markets last week drifted aimlessly. In stocks and commodities the tone was a shade firmer at the close of a week shortened by an extra half-day holiday, but Government bonds were sluggish, notwithstanding the fact that the Supreme Court on Monday upheld both the unemployment insurance and the old age pension sections of the social security law.

In financial matters the week was a colorless one. Only a handful of small new issues were offered, little change was reported in the amount of bank credit in use and the money market finished the spring season with an easy tone.

Only in the commodity field was there any approach to activity. In spite of reports of favorable weather, the position in some of the grain crops is developing into a highly favorable one for higher prices. Corn futures on the Chicago market sold at the highest level in a dozen years. Wheat edged forward. Other farm products also hardened and after six weeks of decline the wholesale commodity index of the Bureau of Labor turned with a rise of six-tenths of 1 per cent. Temporarily the fright over possible deflationary action by Government has subsided and, left to normal influences, commodity markets are proving that their natural trend is strongly upward.

Price Trend Upward.

The tendency of prices to rise and the general expectation that an inflationary boom is more likely than a sustained deflationary movement, provided business is not choked by various restrictions proposed, is giving business management increasing concern. Advances in selling prices carry with them the danger of reduction in consumption, and it is mainly through larger volume of output that many industries hope to maintain a fair profit margin. In any event the cost problem is becoming more complex. On top of the broad wage advances and shortening of hours already in effect in numerous industries and approaching in others, the Administration is preparing still greater things with its 40-hour week and its 40 cents an hour minimum wage.

More Strike News.

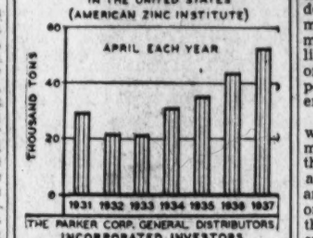
As the holiday begins strike news has increased in importance and outbreaks are under way at several steel plants. They probably will be settled in the usual way, but the constant hammering against industrial management by labor politicians and many whose aim, it is suspected, is primarily that of bringing about changes in our economic system are not calculated to encourage capital. The current dullness in the markets is based less on the actual state of affairs than on the uncertainty over what is coming.

Trade news of the week was mostly favorable. The steel industry increased its operating rate a point or so to around 91 per cent of capacity, but the strikes now called probably will bring a sharp reduction next week. Railroad freight traffic is running at the top for the year, and with the wheat harvest about to begin the movement of freight likely will continue at a level higher than a year ago. Reviewing the past two months the Federal Reserve Board reports an index of industrial production for April and the first half of May virtually unchanged from the high level of March.

Some fear is expressed that the consumption industries this summer and autumn will recede as compared with a year ago, because the stimulus of the two billion dollar soldiers' bonus paid last summer will be lacking. Actually the effect may turn out to be less than imagined. Payment of the bonus at least did a good deal to encourage the resumption of spending, and retail trade continues to feel the uplift. Less actual cash doubtless will be available among some classes of people than was the case a year ago, but the fact that wage rates have risen, along with the total number of employed, has increased the incentive to buy forward.

While it is now only a small cloud on the horizon the rapidly growing practice of installment buying carries with it certain unfavorable possibilities. As all economists have pointed out, the high volume of goods purchased against future wages did much to accentuate the last depression once the round of lower wages and reduced employment began. Sound in itself, installment buying if overdone tends to stimulate production in advance of actual increase in purchasing power. All goes well so long as prosperity continues. In any event forward financing of consumption goods is now running at an unusually high level and that factor is counted upon to make good any slack that might otherwise be felt from the playing out of the bonus spending.

Production of Zinc 21% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., May 30. —The fact that zinc is used in so many different industries makes its production a good indicator of general business activity. Production of zinc is showing healthy gains over last year. April surpassed a year ago by 21 per cent with the first four months production up 12 per cent. In spite of increased production, refinery stocks at the end of April were down to nearly one-sixth those of a year ago. During the past year the price of zinc jumped 51 per cent.

Labor Program Is Held No Bar To Industry

Most Corporations Already Have Met Status Required.

New York, May 30.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"The Administration's proposed wage and hour legislation is comparatively mild and it is not expected to have an important effect on sentiment or industrial operations. There are few industries that do not already meet the requirements as to minimum wages and maximum hours of labor which are likely to be adopted. Elimination of child labor likewise would impose no hardship on industry generally, and socially is to be desired.

"Probably the only industry which would be affected to any marked degree is textiles. Even in this trade many companies are still adhering to the NRA standards, and general working conditions are on a considerably higher plane than they were several years ago. However, a few branches of the textile trade will doubtless fall under the wage and hour and child labor provisions. It is also possible that adjustments will have to be made by certain retail trade organizations.

Black-Connery Bill.

"Broadly viewed, the Black-Connery bill is by no means onerous. Operating costs of industry generally will be little affected if the measure is enacted, and few trades would be forced to change their methods of operation. The chief adverse implication of the proposal is that it might set up a bureaucracy which eventually might attempt to obtain a strong control over prices, competition, and other general business practices.

"Meanwhile, although aggregate industrial activity is continuing to hold at around the best levels of the year, there are signs that a few industries are beginning to feel the effects of a seasonal recession in demand. The cotton textile industry, for example, has been tapering off operations slowly for a number of weeks. There has been a gradual change from a three to two-shift day, and a few smaller mills have closed down completely. The industry, however, has sufficient orders on hand to prevent more than a slow recession in activity over the next month or more.

"Demand for steel also has fallen off in recent weeks, but the industry still enjoys a heavy backlog of orders. The trade consensus is that third quarter operations will average in the 75 per cent to 80 per cent range, which would be highly satisfactory, the season of the year considered."

Security Issues Show Decrease

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act of 1933 indicates that new securities with estimated gross proceeds of $288,076,000 became fully effective during April, 1937. This total is the smallest since November, 1936, and compares with $469,907,000 for March, 1937, and with $751,013,000 for April, 1936.

The April registrations were characterized by the small aggregate of bonds, notes and debentures, and the large number of small stock issues, that were made available for public sale.

Registration of fixed-interest-bearing securities was only slightly over $90,000,000, representing the lowest amount, both in dollars and in per cent, registered for bonds, debentures and short-term notes since the resumption of activity in the corporate markets in March of 1935. It should be noted that more than one-third of the senior security registrations was accounted for by an issue of the Argentine Republic, reducing domestic issues of this type to $58,691,000.

Wood Production Reported Higher

The lumber industry during the week ended May 22 stood at 83 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 78 per cent of 1929 shipments.

Reported new orders were somewhat below the preceding week and only 1 per cent heavier than in corresponding week of 1936. Shipments and production were about the same as the previous week and above similar weeks of 1936. Reported production is running the heaviest of any weeks of this year or last.

National production reported for the week ended May 22 by 3 per cent fewer mills was .4 per cent below the output of the preceding

Bob Burns Says:

I suppose no matter where you go, you'll find chiselers in every line of business but I never heard so much about chiselin' as I did since I came out here to Hollywood.

Chiselers don't overlook anything. A doctor friend of mine told me the other day that he was called in to treat a rich boy who had been hit in the head with a brick. The next day a lady called on him and says "Doctor, I suppose you'll get quite a bit of money for treatin' that rich boy" and the doctor says: "Yes, I demand a pretty good fee," and the lady says: "Well, when you get your money, don't forget it was my little boy that threw the brick!"

Concession

The National Civil Service Reform League writes in to say that a concession to political elements which may seek to control the policies and administration of the Railroad Retirement System is seen in the provision of the Wagner railroad employes' retirement bill exempting employes of the board from the civil service law and classification act.

"The sole concession to the merit system in the bill is the perfunctory provision that the Civil Service Commission shall approve the nature of the test provided by the board for covering into the competitive civil service employes whose original appointment may have been made for reasons far removed from merit," the league holds in a letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

This provision, says the letter, "may be made practically meaningless in its actual effect, and may result in giving permanent tenure to an indeterminate number of persons of minimum qualifications and dubious background, who, if the Civil Service Commisison rather than the board were charged with the examining function, would not be permitted to enter the examination, it was stated.

"This bill represents a distinct backward step in that it would withdraw from the classified civil service the 800-odd positions on the present Railroad Retirement Board, which were placed therein by the statute which created the board," the letter states.

The league said it could see no valid reason for the "sweeping exemptions from the civil service act contained in this bill. The conclusion is inevitable that it represents a concession to certain elements which have a vital interest in controlling the policies and administration of the Railroad Retirement Board."

The league urged the Interstate Commerce Committee to prevent such control by amending the bill to provide that all administrative positions created thereby be subject to the civil service laws and rules.

The regular monthly meeting of Federal Employes Union, No. 261, will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening, at which time delegates and alternates to the national convention will be elected. The following nominations have been made: Ben R. Kleinwachter, William S. Kinney, Miss Gertrude E. Clyle, Charles Bonneville, W. E. Huffheins, Walter E. Marlow, Miss Pearle Cooper, Jesse A. Lay, and J. S. M. Zimmermann.

Following the business meeting, Miss Ann Singleton, of the Air Corps, will talk on "Around the World on a Lead Pencil." In this she will dwell upon personal experiences in nearly every country of the world. Doughnuts and coffee will be served by the Air Corps, writes in R. K. Gheen, the secretary-treasurer.

Some baleful tidings proceed out of the Agriculture Department. It is noted there that in the last few years an increasing number of cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever have been reported in the East. This malady has appeared in nearly all States except those in New England, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Mississippi. And more disturbingly, it is added, a number of cases of this tick-borne disease occur each year in Maryland and Virginia, in the vicinity of Washington, D. C.

All this may be of interest to those many hiking clubs that flourish among the Government workers. Says Dr. F. C. Bishopp, of Agriculture: "From the standpoint of wood-tick infestation, May and June are the worst months for camping or hiking in regions where these insects are abundant. By the first of August the ticks practically disappear. The late summer is a better time for out-of-doors activities in sections where ticks are common."

U.S. Heroes Are Honored At Arlington

ism. Most of them went to Arlington during the day and saw the row on row of white gravestones, a tiny American flag and a scarlet poppy marking each square of greensward.

Following the services, the occasion's principal speaker, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, reported he had suffered a slight sunstroke. The heat and glare, he said, gave him a "splitting headache."

The day was unusually warm in the glaring white amphitheater, where the congregation, dressed in brilliant summer colors, fanned themselves, covered their heads with newspapers, or retreated to the shade of the colonnade flanking the marble bowl.

Though many of the out-of-town visitors departed last night—36 carloads on one railroad excursion alone—an equally great number is expected today. All hotels in the city were reported sold out last night. The Weather Bureau forecast, slightly warmer and fair weather for today.

Pleads for Peace.

Denouncing the Hill-Sheppard bill, indorsed by the American Legion, as tending toward "a Fascist government," the Senator told his audience that the group of liberals to which he belongs will demand an "extremely drastic" substitute bill placing a heavy tax on war profits.

"The last three sessions of Congress has each passed a neutrality law, and each was better than its predecessor," he said. "All marked the first attempt honestly to avoid war by any major government. We are determined to avoid the incredible folly we committed in the last war. But to do so we need stronger legislation than we yet have."

"Let us do everything possible that our children and our children's children shall not make the same sacrifice as these men," he concluded.

Georgetown Exercises.

Col. Charles G. Mortimer, of Fort Myer, in charge of the soldiers who policed the National Cemetery yesterday, estimated that about 16,000 persons visited the shrine at various times during the day.

Another event on today's program besides that at Battleground, will be Memorial Day rites at the Navy Yard, at 11 a. m.

Exercises honoring the memory of 29 students of the Georgetown Law School who gave their lives during the World War were conducted by the seniors and faculty of the school yesterday in the law library, where a bronze tablet bearing the names of the deceased students was decorated.

The principal addresses were given by Dean George E. Hamilton, for the faculty; Col. Ned B. Rehkopf, assistant commander of the Army War College, and Thomas Francis McAllister, special assistant to the Attorney General.

Seniors of the law school were in charge of the program and Leonard J. Wegman, president of the afternoon section of the senior class, presided. Capt. Joseph Vincent Dillon, U. S. A., and Daniel Joseph Leary, both seniors, made brief addresses on behalf of their classes. As a bugler sounded "Taps," a committee of reserve officers attending the school placed a wreath before the memorial tablet.

The Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the law school, who had delivered the opening prayer, also gave the closing address.

There will be a Memorial Day field mass at 10:30 a. m. today at St. James Cemetery, West Falls Church, Va., with the Rev. E. V. Mullarkey as celebrant.

Nurses to Plant Tree.

Under auspices of the American Tree Association, Senior Nurses of Washington Sanitarium will plant a memorial tree on the campus at 1:45 p. m., today, commemorating the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States. The service will be part of the Nation-wide sesquicentennial observance.

Nolan Paroled, Now Facing 4 Added Charges

Ex-Auto Dealer May Be Tried on Forgery Count.

William J. Nolan, erstwhile head of one of the largest motor agencies in Washington, will leave the District jail this week on parole, after serving 5½ months of a sentence of from four months to a year.

The prospect is that he will almost literally go from the jail to the courthouse, for he is facing an early trial on additional charges.

Parole was granted Nolan Saturday by the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, effective immediately, and last night he was awaiting only the arrival of the official papers at the jail. He has been working there in the fingerprint bureau.

Jailed December 18.

Nolan was committed on December 18, after a jury in District Court had found him guilty of bribery in connection with his wife's divorce suit in 1935. He was charged with giving two colored witnesses $50 and automobile tires to leave town.

Since he was sentenced on that charge, Nolan, along with two of his former business associates, has been indicted for forgery, uttering, false pretenses and conspiracy. Nolan pleaded not guilty to the indictment on April 23. At the same time, Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson announced that he and the other two would be tried in the near future.

Board's Statement.

In granting Nolan a parole, the board said:

"One of the main purposes of parole is to aid in the rehabilitation of men who have enjoyed a good standing in the community. * * *

"The board feels from an examination of the record that this applicant is not of antisocial type and that he could safely be paroled. * * * It may be that the new charges against him will prevent such a plan from being carried out, but this is a matter which cannot be determined now."

Glen Echo Crowds Break All Records

Washingtonians took advantage of the warm weather yesterday and thronged to the Crystal Swimming Pool, at Glen Echo Park, breaking all records for a single day's crowd.

The other features, of which there are more than 50, also enjoyed one of the largest days of the season.

Body of Norman Prince to Rest In Episcopal Cathedral Here

American Was Killed in Air Crash While Fighting for France; Family Coming for Committal Services Tomorrow.

The body of Norman Prince, who fought for France and died in 1916 while a member of the famous Lafayette Escadrille, will arrive here at 4:30 p. m. today for entombment in Washington Cathedral.

One of the legendary airmen of the World War, Prince was in the air with Kiffin Rockwell and Clyde Basley in June, 1916, when 40 German planes swooped down. Though forced down, all were unhurt.

A few days later, Prince, with the help of Victor E. Chapman, fought five other German planes. Again he was unhurt, but Chapman, the first American aviator to die for France, was killed.

Prince was killed in a landing crash which followed an air battle in which Raoul Lufberry was his companion. While he lay moaning and unconscious in a field hospital, he was commissioned a second lieutenant and admitted to the Legion of Honor. But the honors came too late—he died a few days later.

His body, originally entombed in the Pro-Cathedral, Paris, reached this country yesterday aboard the French liner Normandie and will reach Washington in one of the Pennsylvania Railroad's special cars.

A delegation of 30 members of the Norman Prince Post of the American Legion met the boat and will accompany the body here. Only close friends have been invited to attend the ceremony at the cathedral tomorrow. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will receive the dead flier's family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, of Boston, father and mother; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, jr., brother and sister-in-law, and Frederick H. Prince 3d, a nephew. All will accompany the body.

Detective Is Wounded While Making Arrest

Four stitches were required to close a wound in his lip received when a colored man struck him with a bottle, Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange reported to his superiors yesterday.

Strange said he was hit by William Bailey, colored, 739 First street northwest, when he attempted to place the man under arrest. Detective Sergt J. J. Tolson also was hit, but did not receive hospital treatment. Strange's wound was treated at Casualty Hospital after he had placed Bailey in a Fifth Precinct station cell. No charges were lodged against Bailey.

Rev. Moody Scores Forces Of Hate, Greed

Episcopal Pastor Sees World Conflict in Spain's Revolt.

"Even though the guns of the great war have been silent in Europe for nearly 19 years, there is no peace," declared the Rev. William R. Moody in a sermon in St. Mark's Episcopal Church yesterday.

"Although the guns are quiet, the world is actually at war," Dr. Moody told the congregation of the church on Capitol Hill.

"The nations are engaged today in the opening moves of as grim a game of chess as the world ever saw. What we see in Spain is but the first cautious pushing about of the pawns."

"There can be no peace, industrial, social or economic, in our land or in the world," the rector asserted, "until we can rid the minds of men everywhere of jealousies, hate and greed, and set up and maintain those principles of justice, morality, righteousness and fair dealing which are inherent in the Christian religion."

While praising the memory of those heroes who have given their lives in military service for our country, Dr. Moody said: "We must not forget, even on this day, our great heroes of peace, men and women, who, although unstoried and unsung, have given their lives in the warfare against sin and evil and death.

Rev. O. J. Hart To Retain Post At St. John's

Rejecting an offer to become bishop coadjutor of Tennessee, the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., one of the Capital's most prominent clergymen, will continue his rectorship at St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest.

The rector announced his decision from his pulpit during morning services in the church yesterday.

"I have declined the call, hoping that we can carry on the work done here during the last three years," Dr. Hart told his parishioners.

Dr. Hart came here from Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1934. He has been a leader, not only in the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, but also in affairs of the whole Protestant organization.

He was informed of his appointment to the high Tennessee office by a committee which came to Washington last week. Had he accepted, Dr. Hart would have been in line of succession for the Tennessee bishopric.

Midshipmen Attend Last Joint Service

Navy Graduates Hear Chaplain Condemn Weaklings.

Comdr. Thomas Calls for 'Brains and Strength of Spirit.'

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 30.—Members of the Naval Academy's graduating class gathered in the chapel today to worship together for the last time as midshipmen and hear a challenge to be ready to "stand watch" in life.

Seated under stained-glass windows dedicated to naval heroes, the 325 graduating midshipmen heard Comdr. William N. Thomas, U. S. N., Academy chaplain, assert in a baccalaureate sermon "this is no day for weaklings and lovers of ease."

Natty in full dress uniforms, the graduates marched into the chapel through lines of parents, sweethearts and friends here for the service and the Academy's June week activities.

Chaplain Thomas took his text from the thirty-fourth chapter of Exodus, "Be ready in the morning and come up." He said this could be expressed in Navy vernacular as "stand your watch."

"This is no day for weaklings and lovers of ease," he asserted. "The fight of your day will demand brains and strength of spirit."

At noon, in Thompson Stadium, midshipmen athletes will be presented the awards they have won. At 5:30 p. m. there will be a dress parade.

On Tuesday, at 10 a. m., there will be practical drills in the departments of ordanance and gunnery, marine engineering and electrical engineering.

At 5 p. m. will come the traditional presentation of colors ceremony on Worden field, the highlight of June week. That night there will be the "N" dance and the third class "hop."

Aquatic events and seamanship hold the spotlight for Wednesday morning. That afternoon there will be a dress parade, with presentation of prizes and awards. That night the middies and their sweethearts will dance at the "farewell ball."

SHUTE DEFEATS McSPADEN ON 37th HOLE, RETAINS PRO TITLE

Hooked Tee Shot Costs Kansan Title

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pittsburgh Field Club, Aspinwall, Pa., May 30.—Professional golfers championship came within a hooked tee shot of changing hands today, but that shot cost Jug McSpaden his chances and tonight Denny Shute is still the reigning titleholder of the paid clan after a grueling 37-hole battle over the Field Club course. Three times today the challenger was in the lead and a gallery of some 8,000 condemned Shute to a like fate of a drowning man as he went down for the third time, by two holes and only three to play.

But they failed to reckon with the hook, a rebellious tee shot that McSpaden had controlled for 214 holes. Only 2 short of payoff time, it reached out and with a mighty sweep drew his ball into the trees on the thirty-fifth hole and the deep rough on the thirty-seventh and the broad-shouldered, 29-year-old Kansan dropped from the driver's seat into the soon-to-be-forgotten runner-up role.

Square at Thirty-sixth.

As the match went through the thirty-sixth hole all square, 15 minutes were required to remove a panicky gallery from the fairway and when the marshals had at last cleared the way, Shute split the middle with a 250-yard drive that was followed by Jug's hooked drive into the rough bordering the trees. The challenger played out and his ball ran through a trap in front of the green but it was caught in the rough and when Denny played a beautiful iron shot within 20 feet of the pin it was just about over.

Jug cut one from the rough, 10 feet from the pin, and Denny played safe. The crowd was tense as McSpaden stroked his ball, and dropped to his knees as if attempting to steer it into the cup, but it slid past. Denny stepped up to the shot that would retain his title and streaked it into the cup. A wild scramble for the ball followed and Denny was lifted to the shoulders of admiring caddies and carried to the clubhouse amid a howling mob.

Takes Lead Quickly.

McSpaden wasted little time in assuming a lead, birdying the par 4 first hole, laying his second shot within 5 feet of the pin, while Denny was short in 2 and took 5 to get down. Shute's partial stymie of Jug's ball on the second prevented him from making another possible birdie, the Westerner preferring to play safe and they halved the hole in par 4s.

The continuance of his great recovery play staked McSpaden to a 2 up lead on the third hole with a birdie 4, after his second caught the rough to the left. He made a 10-foot putt. Denny provided the first real thrill of the round when he overshot the next green but nearly chipped in the hole from his hanging lie. They halved it in threes.

A pair of perfect woods on the fifth placed McSpaden on the sloping bank in back of the green, but he chipped to within inches of the cup while Denny blew a 5-footer for a halve. It was McSpaden's third birdie in five holes.

Denny Putts 45 Feet.

The putting touch that Denny amazed the gallery with for the rest of the morning was in evidence on the next hole when the lanky Bostoner sank a curling 10-footer for his first birdie. A 45-foot putt on the seventh, needless because McSpaden was out of bounds, accounted for Shute's second consecutive birdie.

They halved the eighth in bogey 5's, each missing a putt of 5 feet but Denny came back on the ninth to square the match with another 10-foot birdie putt as the gallery went wild.

He was out in 35, one under par, while McSpaden's card was unofficial as he picked up on the seventh. Shute had 3 bordies, his opponent 2.

The champion lapsed momentarily on the tenth and eleventh, Jug assuming the lead again with a par 4 on 11.

McSpaden apparently had the edge on the twelfth hole, lacking a foot of being on the par 5 hole in 2, while Dennly was trapped to the right, but it was here that Shute played six holes in as brilliant fashion as this or any other tourney has ever witnessed.

His trap shot on 12 nestled about 6 feet from the pin and he made the putt for a birdie. On the thirteenth Denny hit a fine drive and placed an 8-inch shot 5 feet away, downing the putt for another sub-par hole. He won the fourteenth with a par. McSpaden pulling an iron shot and taking four to get down. Mac won the next when Denny tried to play a niblick approach on the 561-yard hole too fine and the ball slid into a trap on the right. He was down in 6 to Jug's par 5.

On 16 Denny placed his tee shot

Sington to Receive Diamond Trophy

Memories of his success in the Southern Association last season will be revived for Outfielder Freddie Sington, of the Nats, between games of today's Memorial Day double-header.

Sington will be presented with the Sporting News Trophy, emblematic of his selection as the most valuable player in the Southern League in 1936.

Speaker of the House Bankhead or Vice President Garner will make the presentation to Sington at home plate. Before entering professional baseball, Sington was a two-time All-American tackle at the University of Alabama, Speaker Bankhead's alma mater.

With Chattanooga last season, Sington batted .384.

Pete Appleton Is Pitching and Batting Star; Gets Four Hits.

By Shirley Povich.

Fenway Park, Boston, May 30.—Peter Jablonski, of the Perth Amboy, N. J., Jablonskis, who couldn't hold a pitching job with the Red Sox a few years ago, came back to Boston today as Pete Appleton, of the Washington pitching staff, and created quite a furore.

Appleton was the winning pitcher as the Nats slapped down the Red Sox, 11 to 4, in full view of 20,000 Boston citizens, but old Pete didn't confine his heroics to pitching today.

He had a pretty fair afternoon.

He threw a seven-hit ball game into the faces of the Bostons which had been flushed with the joy of a five-game winning streak, but that isn't all he did. Listen:

He stepped up there at the plate five times with a bat in his hand and this is what he did:

Second inning—Bashed a single to center that scored Washington's first two runs of the ball game.

Fifth inning—Struck out (as all great sluggers sometime do).

Allows Seven Hits.

Eighth inning—Hit a single over the bag at third base that scored Washington's last run of the ball game.

All told old Pete didn't accomplish much except drive in six of Washington's runs today.

But old Pete wasn't neglecting his pitching chores while he was out there collecting those four hits of his. He was very chary about how he handed out hits to the Red Sox. Only in the seventh did he give 'em more than one.

And two of these Boston runs found old Pete kind of blameless. That was in the second inning when the Red Sox tied the score at 2-2 because Ben Chapman with his bad leg couldn't get up a gallop as Eric McNair's double sailed out toward the centerfield wall. Chapman, in good health, would have caught that ball and Pete would have been out of the inning undamaged.

Two Home Runs.

Those other two runs of the Red Sox were legitimate though. They were spawned by the home run bats of Jimmy Fox, who knocked a 475-footer high into the centerfield seats in the sixth, and Buster Mills who busted an Appleton pitch over the leftfield wall in the next inning. But Pete, at that time, was only coasting behind a 9-3 lead.

Once upon a time Fritz Ostermueller used to torment the Nats with his southpaw delivery—but not today. They put him on the fritz and out of the ball game with an uprising in the fourth and then fattened their batting averages against the spare-ribbed rookie, Ted Olson, late of Minneapolis, during the rest of the game.

Al Simmons sounded the locsin—whatever that is—for the first Washington assault on Ostermueller when he put a huge dent in the leftfield wall with a single in the second inning. Kuhel walked, but there were two out when Appleton stepped to the plate.

Two Out, Two Strikes

And there were two strikes on Appleton when he finally swung and drove those two runs across with a single to dead center. But Pete was only warming up for more vigorous efforts later.

He got his next chance in the third when Freddie Sington instituted proceedings against Ostermueller with a two-bagger that all but cleared the leftfield wall. Cecil Travis got a base with a pass and Ostermueller should have escaped the inning without damage, but he didn't because Eric McNair dropped Higgins' throw at second base when Millies apparently grounded into a force play.

That filled the bases and brought Appleton up again. Very pitcher-like, he swung wildly for two strikes and then he took a new grip

Drivers Await Start Of Indianapolis Race

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, May 30.—A bomb, bursting high in the air at 10 o'clock (C. S. T.) tomorrow morning, will send 33 of America's greatest automobile race drivers from the starting line in the silver anniversary Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Some of the drivers will be veterans of the roaring road who have driven many hundreds of miles over the 2½-mile motor speedway race. Others will be youngsters getting their first taste of the high speed which prevails at the Indianapolis track.

Speedway officials predicted tonight the greatest crowd in history—more than 160,000—will pack the mile-long grandstands and the huge infield to watch the battle for approximately $100,000 in prize money.

The drivers were unanimous in an opinion they would have to drive faster than ever before to finish first. The general prediction was that it would take about 112 miles an hour to win the race. The present record, established last year by Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., is 109.696 miles an hour.

Meyer to Start.

Meyer, who has won three Indianapolis races, more than any other man, will be in the starting field. Two other former winners will be with him. They are "Wild Bill" Cummings, of Indianapolis, sitting in the pole position, and Kelly Petillo, the little Los Angeles Italian.

Crowds jammed Indianapolis streets tonight All roads led to the Speedway. There was a long line of automobiles waiting at the Speedway gate for the opening at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Fear of bad weather for the race was allayed somewhat today. Yesterday the United States Weather Bureau forecast showers but that was changed today to "increasing cloudiness." Only once in Speedway history has it been necessary to postpone a race because of bad weather.

The track was closed today, but the drivers received final instructions and went home to await the start of the long grind.

The race already has taken a toll of two lives this year. George Warford, of Indianapolis, was killed Friday when a flaming race car struck him as he was standing in the pits. Albert Opalko, of Gary, Ind., a riding mechanic, lost his life when a speedster driven by Frank McuGrk overtruned.

Two Eliminated.

Two of the 35 qualifiers for the race wlil eb letf in the pits when the race starts unless one of the others fails to get to the starting line. Only the 33 fastest cars are allowed to start, and that eliminated Emil Andres, of Chicago, and Joel Thorne, youthful New York millionaire.

The fastest car in the race, based on qualifying trials, will be a six-cylinder job driven by Jimmy Snyder, of Chicago. His qualifying speed was 125.287 miles an hour. The slowest will be that driven by A. B. (Deacon) Litz, of Dubois, Pa., who ran his trial test at 116.372 miles an hour. Litz' time was only about 3 miles an hour slower than the fastest qualification mark last year.

Two of the cars in the race have foreign-built motors. One, an Alfa Romeo, will be driven by Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif. The other, a Maserati, will be driven by Babe Stapp, of Dallas, Tex.

The holiday atmosphere of the crowd tonight was tempered somewhat by the fact the State law requires all taverns to be closed on Sunday. There wasn't much for the race fans to do but mill the streets.

The first thing on the program tomorrow morning will be the parade down the home stretch of the 1,000-piece band. Then the cars will move to the starting line, and the race will be on.

West Point Bows, 10-3; Brewers Take Series

West Point, Va., May 30.—The Heurich Brewers made it a clean sweep of their two-game series with West Point here today, winning 10-3 on Ralph Bennie's eight-hit pitching effort. The Brewers won, 10-4, yesterday in 14 innings.

School Golf Title Is Won By Brownell

Bobby Brownell, Roosevelt High's youthful wizard of the fairways, showed his dogged, championship mettle again yesterday when he won the fourth annual Metropolitan Schoolboy tournament after 35 tense, scorching holes of golf at Congressional Country Club.

Beset by two stubborn foes—Buddy Sharkey, of Gonzaga, in the morning semifinal match and Charlie Sullivan, of Bethesda-Chevy Chase in the final—Bobby fought off their grim challenges down the homestretch to win the coveted Washington Post Trophy with one of the coolest, pluckiest exhibitions in the tourney's history. He halted Sullivan by a narrow 1-up margin.

The little, light-haired fellow thus completed a grand slam unprecedented in District and Maryland golf circles—a championship campaign which leaves him District amateur champion, Maryland State junior champion, District junior champion and now Metropolitan schoolboy champion.

Trailed at Fourteenth.

The teen-aged links king was 1 down at the fourteenth hole of his final round match only to come through with a blast which stowed away the title with a smashing finish. All along he had seen Sullivan set a pace as hot as the sun which was baking the course. The Roosevelt boy had evened the match on the thirteenth only to see Charlie lay a spoon on the 225-yard fourteenth for an easy par 3 to reestablish his lead.

But Brownell had not withstood the desperate bid of the higher rated Sharkey in the morning to bow to young Sullivan, capable, courageous dark horse that he was. He captured the next two holes in a row with par fours as the Bethesda shotmaker took a six and five respectively and then matched Charlie's par-equaling finish stroke for stroke to win the title.

Bobby's stretch drive over the last nine holes in 38 gave him a 79 to Charlie's 81 after the Bethesda entry had set the pace over the first nine with a 39 to his opponent's 41. Par for the course is 72.

A large gallery followed the finalists throughout their tense title round duel. An assemblage almost as large had turned out in the morning for the semifinals, which saw Sharkey take Brownell to 17 holes before succumbling. Sullivan was meanwhile eliminating Dick Meyer, St. John's captain, 2 up in the other semifinal.

Thus, the stage was set for a bitter struggle for the title between Brownell, the pretourney favorite, and Sullivan, the startling Maryland dark horse. Six times the lead was to change hands before the finish.

Bobby Leads on Second.

They got off to par fives, and Bobby took the lead on the second, when Sullivan three-putted. Charlie evened the match with a well-played four on the fourth and both parred the fifth. Charlie's par 4 took the sixth, but along came Brownell, however, to lift a 180-yard four-wood to within 5 feet of the pin for a birdie, which deadlocked the match.

Bobby found a trap on the eighth and Charlie made the turn 1-up, two over par for the first nine. Back came Brownell in true championship style to play the tenth perfectly and even the match. Sullivan took the eleventh, but lost the thirteenth, and his neat spoon shot on the fourteenth seemed only the spark which spurred his jndomitable little foe to end the match with a brisk, businesslike finish.

Tom Fitzgerald, of Gonzaga, won the second flight of the tournament. He defeated Harmon, 2 and 1, in the semifinals and then downed Leapley, 2 up, to capture the flight.

110th Field Artillery Polo Team Is Winner

Baltimore, May 30.—The 110th Field Artillery riders galloped to an 8-to-7 victory over the Washington Polo Club here at Pikesville this afternoon.

The game was close throughout, both clubs scoring three goals in the first half. The visitors rode into the final chukker with a 7-6 lead, but the Artillerymen erased this in short order and then won the final match with a foul shot.

Terps Reign Favorites in A. A. U. Meet

New Records Expected; Brilliant Field Will Seek Honors.

The nearest approach to a big-time intercollegiate track meet offered fans in this vicinity will be staged this afternoon at College Park, where nearly 100 athletes, representing colleges, high schools and clubs are scheduled to compete in the annual District A. A. U. championship meet. The first event is scheduled for 3 p. m.

No world or even national records seem threatened but the natural rivalries existing among the various organizations augurs well for a close and exciting afternoon. Whenever you find Maryland, Catholic University and Georgetown men on the same field at the same time there's bound to be action, and plenty of it.

Maryland enters the games a distinct favorite, but in no wise assured of gaining the crown. Too many factors entered into the matter to choose the winner much before the final event. Gallaudet College, for example, isn't considered a contender for the championship, but it has a couple of boys, Elmer Babbs and Joe Burnett, whose efforts may go a long way toward deciding the winner.

Strong in Field.

The Terps are expected to clean up in field events, with Bill Guckeyson and Alex Males competing for them, and should score heavily in racing. "Swede" Eppley's capable varsity squad has been bolstered by the addition of several good freshmen for today's program, and the day may afford a preview of Maryland's 1938 team.

Catholic University's full team, featuring Corrado Goffredi, pole-vaulter; Bob McCulloch, quarter-miler; Howard Walker, sprinter, and Tom Mix, a much-improved miler. The Cards do not measure up to their neighboring rivals on paper, but should be well up among the leaders.

The lists are crowded with good, substantial trackmen, not all of whom hail from the larger schools, but who still pick 'em up and lay 'em down in approved league fashion. One of these is Johnny Leiss, carrying the colors of the Washington Track and Field Club, who is expected to fight it out with Ken Belt, of Maryland, in the 2-mile run, one of the day's features. Leiss, a consistent winner at 5 miles, never has won the shorter race.

Another outstanding race is the 440-yard run, in which a small but select field will face the starter. Warren Evans, former Maryland star; Bill Theis, an alumnus of Tech High School; Frank Davis, Gallaudet; Stewart Reeves, of Georgetown and former national schoolboy champion at the distance, are the principal contenders.

In the mile Mason Chronister, still another Marylander, will attract much attention because of his numerous predictions that he will break the record currently held by a teammate, Coleman Headley. Chronister seems capable of fulfilling his promise, having recently negotiated the distance in 4:23 against Navy's Plebes.

An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged at the stadium.

Batters Wear Polo Helmets As Safeguard

Western Leaguers Try Hats and Dislike Heavy Weight.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 30.—The use of polo helmets as a safeguard against the dreaded "bean ball" was tried out in the first inning of the Des Moines-Cedar Rapids Western League game here today, but the test failed to solve the problem.

Players, managers and fans alike agreed the helmets were too heavy and cumbersome, but were unanimous in the opinion that a headgear of lighter weight would protect the hitter from uncontrolled pitches.

Several batters objected to the inconvenience of adjusting the helmet and then discarding it en route to first base. The headgear was worn only while the player was at bat.

Agreeing that a lighter helmet might solve the problem, Umpire Eddie Goes opposed the type used today. He suggested baseball players adopt jockey caps.

Budge-Mako Take Slow 3-Set Match

Scores of 7-5, 6-1, 8-6, Fail to Indicate Lop-sided Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., May 30.—The United States completed the rout of Australia's ailing Davis Cup tennis forces today by romping off with the doubles match, thereby making it three straight and settling the outcome of the North American zone finals without the loss of a single set.

The dynamic California combination of Don Budge and Gene Mako whipped Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, 7—5, 6—1, 8—6, in a match that was more one-sided than the scores indicated and which furnished few thrills for a crowd of scarcely 5,000 spectators in the West Side Club's stadium.

Following yesterday's decisive singles conquests by Budge over Crawford, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant over the young Australian substitute, Jack Bromwich, today's victory made the score 3-0 in America's favor and clinched this country's right to play the European zone winner, probably Germany, for the right to challenge the cup-holding British, shorn this year of the great Fred Perry's services.

Series Clinched.

Two singles matches will conclude the series tomorrow, with Budge opposing Bromwich and Grant meeting Crawford, but they can affect nothing but the final score.

America's three successive triumphs, all gained in straight-set fashion in two days of competition, not only clinched the series with unexpected ease, but put a dismal finishing touch to Australia's hard-luck cup campaign. Minus the services of their ace, Adrian Quist, because of illness, and with McGrath barely off the sick list, the Aussies came half-way around the world only to find themselves too badly handicapped to cope with this country's youthful forces.

Favored less than a fortnight ago to repeat their triumph of a year ago, gained by a 3-2 margin, the Australians turned out to be hopelessly off-form and outclassed. Not only was their pre-battle sick list heavy, but it developed, once play started, that the veteran Crawford no longer possessed either the speed, the confidence or the shots to keep pace with his American rivals. The one-time world champion, on both days, was only a memory of the player who swept all before him a few years ago.

Hopes Now Brighter.

America's Davis Cup hopes have now assumed brighter hue than at any time since the great Bill Tilden and, subsequently, Ellsworth Vines turned from amateur to professional ranks.

Led by the brilliant Budge, this country's team will leave Saturday for Europe and the final stages of a campaign that patriots hope will restore the classic cup to American hands after a ten-year lapse. The inter-zone finals will be played in mid-July at Wimbledon and the challenge round a week later.

Budge and Marko, eager to avenge the setback they absorbed a year ago at the hands of the Australians, dominated the doubles match with their forceful shotmaking at every critical stage.

The Australian pair looked threatening only twice during a generally dusultory contest. They led, 3—1, in the first set. They also were within a point of saving the third set when they rallied to lead, 6—5 in game and 40—30 against Budge's service, but they were

This Morning

POVICH.

Boston, May 30.—It was a pretty fair guess that the Nats would break out in a rash of base hits today after this department mentioned off-hand in this space yesterday that the Washington club couldn't bat its way out of a cellophane wrapper.

One word of disdain from me and that ragamuffin Spanish loyalist army would rear up and slap down both Germany and Italy just to make this department look bad. One word of praise from me and that magnificent British fleet would probably be swept clear of the seas by those three trawlers that constitute the Spanish navy. It works both ways. The last time I called one right was when I predicted a guy named Max would win the Schmeling-Baer fight.

This department had scarcely gone to press with the wail that the Washington club wasn't hitting when the Nats promptly began to make a liar out of me. They didn't waste any time today. The first batter up against the Red Sox, Ben Chapman, got a hit.

They had been averaging only seven hits and two runs per game for seven games until I published that fact in this space. Today, against a pitcher who pitched three four-hit games against 'em last year, they made 14 hits and 11 runs.

Even Pete Appleton, of all people, at today. The day after this department moaned in print that the Nats' batting attack was a woeful disappointment, the Washington pitcher makes not only one hit, or two, or three—but four line-drive socks, one of them a triple with the bases full, and slams six runs across the plate. Whoops!

The Washington club, which has been handicapped by a lack of catching talent all season, now finds itself in the strange position of a club with too many catchers. Manager Bucky Harris must prune his staff of backstops or he will get into trouble with Commissioner Landis' office, which limits each club to 23 players.

There are 24 athletes on the Washington roster at this writing and four of them are catchers. Thus, one of the catchers will have to go. No team limited to 23 players can afford to carry four backstoppers.

When the Nats entrained for Boston a few days ago, Bucky Harris apparently was facing no problem in cutting his catching staff. Cliff Bolton had joined the club, Walter Millies was looking like the best catcher on the team, young Milton Gray had been showing much promise, and there was, of course, Shanty Hogan.

All signs pointed to Hogan's release, unconditionally, or his retirement to a coach job. But in the opening game at Boston, Hogan hit the ball on the nose all day, got one two-bagger that cleared the centerfield fence but was knocked back on the playing field by the set of loudspeakers atop the wall, and actually showed some speed on the bases.

That kind of a Hogan is indispensable to the Nats, and Harris now finds himself with a problem. He wants Bolton with the club if Bolton is in shape to play. He needs the reliable Millies and he wants to give young Gray a long tryout. Hogan, in the best form he has shown with the Nats, paradoxically appears fated for the pink slip.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox has been eyeing Washington's regular outfielders and attempting to make a trade that would bring either Al Simmons, Ben Chapman or Johnny Stone to Boston. But the Sox are in no position to make a deal for any of 'em.

They have no trading material with the exception of the aging Rick Ferrell, who is now ailing with a fractured hand, and Griffith is in no mood to make a deal for straight cash. Above all, the Red Sox are wasting their time if they are dickering for Ben Chapman.

Because Chapman is the favorite ball player of the Washington club owner, despite the outfielder's recent lapses in the field which have cost Washington two ball games within a week.

Griffith can become as impatient with a ball player as the most critical fan, but in Chapman's case he is making allowances for Chapman's bruised hip.

"He's my kind of a ball player," Griffith was saying the other day

"Chapman has got class. He can do everything. He's the kind to have on my club. Did you see what he did out there this afternoon? That St. Louis pitcher tried to pick him off first base nine times. That's how Ben bruised his hip—sliding back to the bag.

"And then Ben went right ahead and stole second the first time that the pitcher threw one up to the plate. That's the kind of a ball player I like."

New Dealers Win.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 30.—The New Deal Men's Shop of Washington, leaders in the Capital's Sunday League "B" section, defeated the Fredericksburg Elks, 2 to 0, here today on the six-hit pitching of Lefty Arnold Heft. Randy Heflin, highly touted local pitcher, was the losing pitcher.

Welsh Loses Set in Annual Net Tourney

Youngster Tests Champ; Mitchell and Latona Lead Field.

Dooly Mitchell and Tony Latona, second and third seeded players, moved a jump ahead of the field in the City of Washington tennis championships yesterday, breezing into the fifth round in straight-set fashion.

The veteran Mitchell disposed of Ervin Niemeyer, 6—1, 6—4, and the wiry Latona turned back Capt. Stanley R. Robinson with surprising ease, 6—2, 6—3. Ray Blade was the only other entrant to reach the fifth round, defeating Austin Rice, conqueror of the No. 6 seeded Dean Judd, 5—7, 8—6, 6—4.

One round behind Mitchell, Latona, Barney Welsh, the defending champion, encountered considerable difficulty before reaching the fourth round. Barney was forced to an extra set before eliminating young Billy Contreras, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2.

The champion is due for a tough afternoon today at 3 p. m., when he meets Harry Heffner, No. 9 Junior player of the country. Heffner eliminated Davie Johnsen, 6—1, 6—1, to reach the fourth round and should be several shades more formidable than Contreras.

Links Match To Didrikson And Spencer

Defeat Miss Dettweiler and Leo Walper by 3 and 2 Margin.

Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional, and Leo Walper, a driving range professional, were defeated, 3 and 2, by Mildred (Babe) Didrikson and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam's pro, at the Beaver Dam Club in an exhibition match yesterday.

The team which eventually won went into the tenth with a two-hole lead. That lead was increased to three at the fifteenth and the match decided on the sixteenth hole. The Didrikson-Spencer combination had a best ball score of 70.

First prize in the first Kenwood bureau sweepstakes tournament was won by George Trew, who posted a par round of 71 and had a handicap allowance of six strokes for a net 65.

R. A. Weaver finished second with 73-4—69. George Vass posted 80-10—70 to tie for third with Paul Dalis, who had 79-9—70. Class B was won by M. T. Camby with 78-12—66. and J. T. Hutchinson, jr., with 81-15—66.

First place in class C was taken by G. E. Reeling, with an 83-18—65, and H. T. Snyder was second in this class with 90-18—72. Class D was won by L. A. Hageria, 91-25—66, and R. B. Staord was second with 94-26—68.

Shute Retains National Pro Golf Laurel

16 feet from the pin and the crowd moaned as the putt stopped on the lip, halving the hole. Another of his spectacular approach shots featured the seventeenth, Shute making needless birdie as McSpaden was in trouble and failed to reach the green in four strokes.

Denny climaxed his 2 under par round on the final hole by rolling in a 20-foot putt for a birdie and 3 up lead. Jug hooked his tee shot and was on in 2 but missed an 18-footer.

Five 3s and a 4 on a par 5 hole dotted Denny's last seven holes, and his entire round included seven birdies, while McSpaden made three.

The longer hitting challenger was out in front off the tee on a majority of occasions but lacked the consistency and smoothness that featured Shute's card and above all, lacked the putting touch that drew praise from the gallery.

Denny visited two traps on the first hop of the final round and lost the next to Jug's birdie 3. He made it 2 up again on the fourth with his last birdie of the day but lost it back to McSpaden's fifth hole birdie and lost his entire 3-hole lead at the eighth as Jug's second shot nearly landed in the hole on the 452-yard par 4.

McSpaden regained his earlier lead on the ninth or twenty-seventh hole as Denny, in trouble on his first two shots, took 5, but the see-saw play of both contestants switched to Shute on the tenth after a fine approach shot and a 4-foot putt. Denny, scrambling for halves now, made an 8-footer on the eleventh, but lost his advantage as "Jug" birdied the twelfth hole.

The steel-nerved Shute pulled his second on the thirteenth, or thirty-second hole and bowed to a par 4 and 3-putted the next and lost it as Mac played a magnificent trap shot and rifled in for a putt and birdie. The thirty-third was played in regulation fashion and Denny, still 2 down, was running out of holes.

Neither reached the green of the par 3, thirty-fourth hole from the tee, but Shute's approach from the rough was better than Mac's trap shot and took a new lease on life with a 4-foot putt.

White Haven Seizes 'B' Loop Lead

Hume Springs Takes Dominion 'National' First Place.

A crowd of close to 3,000 gathered on the Ellipse yesterday to see Costello Post win a protested victory from Fort Stevens Post, 11 to 4, and take the lead in the American Legion Junior League in the day's sandlot feature.

Taking advantage of the idleness of unlimited city leagues, the juvenile loop furnished some warm action as the two rivals battled for first place. Meanwhile, in suburban circles, keen fights for the leads in the two Sunday sections of the Old Dominion League were materializing.

Hume Springs and Forestville met for the lead in the National section and Forestville emerged second best, victim of a 3-1 defeat. Nokesville met a surprising upset, 21 to 9, at the hands of the Virginia White Sox and missed a chance to go into a second place tie.

Herndon, Arlington Tied.

Ballston and Clarendon A. C. are still setting the pace in the Old Dominion's night section.

The only National City League game saw the fast White Haven A. C. sweep into a tie with New Deal Men's Shop with a 12-7 victory on the able pitching of Jim Pennyfield. It was Jim's fourth straight victory for White Haven in four starts.

He weakened a bit near the finish and permitted four runs in the last two innings, but his big lead, helped by the terrific hitting of Harry Best, who gathered two singles and a home run, was enough to enable him to coast into victory, although nicked for nine hits.

Fort Stevens Protests.

The American Legion fight saw Buddy Webb on the firing line for Costello, allowing nine effectively scattered hits to win his team's fifth straight league victory. Fort Stevens claims its protest on a decision by Umpire Jones. Jack Smith tripled in the third inning for Fort Stevens, and Webb then pitched to John Arbuthnot, next batter. Then Jones called Smith out for not touching second base.

Manager John C. Zetts of Fort Stevens claims the decision should have come directly after the play in question.

Costello piled up its lead on a dozen hits of which Leftfielder Donaldson collected a triple, double and single to lead the attack. Lou Mostow, Costello centerfielder, made two of the finest running catchers seen on local sandlots this or any other season.

Nash Post missed a chance to go into second place when it bowed to Agriculture Post, 14 to 0. Dick Rozzelle, of Central High, was the winning pitcher.

Navy Crew Victories Are Challenge to West

Middies Look Ahead to Poughkeepsie After Sweeping Varsity, Jayvee, Freshman Events in Adams Cup; Army Wins in Two Events.

A challenge across the continent to California and Washington crews was hurled by the United States Naval Academy's great crew Saturday as it swept the varsity, jayvee and freshman events on the Adams Cup program on the Schuylkill River.

Although Army got the jump on the Middies in two of the three sports played between the service schools, Navy's crew victories balanced the books for an 8-3 baseball defeat and a 6-5 lacrosse loss. In track, the Middie runners came off with a 68-58 victory over the Cadets.

Sweeping the final of the sprint rowing events of the season over Harvard and Pennsylvania in the Adams Cup Races was the greatest accomplishment of the day for the Navy. Victories in the three events cleared decks for action at Poughkeepsie next month.

By the thin margin of a single second, the Middie crew won over Harvard's second place eight, Penn's varsity, which had led for three-fourths of the Henley distance dash, was just two seconds behind the Crimson in a magnificent final chapter to the season's sprint events.

JUNIOR VARSITY—Navy, 6:35; Harvard, 6:38; Penn, 6:50.

FRESHMAN—Navy, 6:30 1-5; Harvard, 6:35; Penn, 6:42.

The Midshipmen's plebes started the regatta with victory in the freshman races and the Annapolis oarsmen won the junior varsity competition, the semi-final of the day's races. In these, as in the big event, the order was the same at the finish.

All three crews remained in the race in the varsity event until they reached Peters Island, a quarter-mile from the finish line, when the Penn crew spurted ahead.

At West Point the Army gained its nineteenth baseball victory over the Middies by winning the thirty-first game of a series that started in 1901. The score was 8-3.

The Annapolis trackmen came back, however, to defeat the West Point runners, 68-58, in the eleventh meet between the two schools. The track series now stands at 8-3 in favor of the Army. A crowd of some 8,000 saw both contests.

Army bats broke a tie in the seventh inning of the ball game, blasting away to four runs on four hits, all of them for extra bases. Griffin and Kasper hit homers while Durbin and Dobson got triples.

The track meet was a closely fought affair, with Army leading after the eleventh event on the program, 50-49. Navy came through to win in the late stages of the meet, when it took first and second in the discus, first and third in the broad jump and first in the high jump.

It was the third goal for the Cadet, who shared honors with Tommy Truxton. Army captain. Monk Meyer, brilliant four-letter man, ended his career against Navy by playing in most of the contest.

U. S. Captures Tennis Series From Anzacs

Otherwise, they were no match for the young Californians in any vital department of play.

Several close line decisions that went against them did not bolster the sagging spirits of the invaders. One of these "breaks" cost them a chance to break Mako's service in the first set. This was sandwiched between breaks through McGrath and Crawford and proved fatal to what slim chance the Aussies had of making a winning point.

Two breaks through McGrath's service were all the Americans needed to breeeze through the second set, with the loss of one game—the fourth.

The Australians made a last-ditch stand after losing Crawford's service to trail, 4-5, in the final set. They broke through Mako, then capitalized McGrath's delivery, and had the set point against Budge in the twelfth game, only to fold under Don's next three service shots. Crawford's service was broken, for the fourth time, and Mako then made his service good in the last game, putting over an ace for the deciding point.

Crawford's wildness, on top of repeated fumbles of easy volleys, proved costly to the Aussies. McGrath, the supposed weaker half of the team, was much steadier under pressure. Mako piled up as many errors as Crawford, but he was deadly with his drives at critical stages. Gene lost his service only once, while Budge's delivery was twice upset.

In an exhibition doubles, Frankie Parker, member of the American Cup squad, paired with Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., to beat the young Californians, Wayne Sabin and Bobby Riggs, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Win at Congressional In Scotch Foursome

At the Congressional Country Club, Mrs. M. B. Daniels and T. J. Winkler took the mixed Scotch foursome with a low net of 95—22—73. There was a tie for second low net between Mrs. H. Weber and Dave Morris, 101—24—77, and Mrs. Walter Rice and W. Wenzel, 90—13—77.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Rhyne, with an 83, won low gross honors.

Coast Guard Saves 10 Who Left Yacht

Ocean City, Md., May 30 (AP).—Coast Guard men today rescued ten persons who had jumped from a disable fishing yacht and were being hurled by the surf onto the slippery, sharp-pointed rocks of North Jetty, 600 yards from the Ocean City shore.

Three of seven women in the group were cut and bruised on the rocks, one, Mrs. Lena Layton, so badly she was unable to stand when a Coast Guard surfboat took her from the water.

Miss Mary Bailey and Mrs. Charles A. Law, wife of the owner of the boat, were less badly hurt by the pounding surf.

The other seven were not injured. They suffered, however, from fright and the chilling effect of the water.

Prayers for Pope Pius at Shrine Here

Special Masses Mark Birthday Of Pope Pius

Apostolic Delegate Lauds Work in Broadcast From Capital.

The works of Pope Pius XI in his 15 years as supreme pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church, have "had a profound influence in every corner of the globe," and have compelled world-wide admiration and respect, noted spokesmen for the church declared in addresses here yesterday celebrating the Pope's eightieth birthday anniversary.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, took the lead in ceremonies commemorating the birthday, which occurs today, in a Nation-wide broadcast from Washington last night. He described the Pope as "father and teacher of the nations."

High Government officials and members of the diplomatic corps attended a solemn pontifical mass yesterday morning in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University—a service over which the apostolic delegate presided. The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, was celebrant, and the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university, preached the birthday anniversary sermon.

In every parish of the Capital, as in every diocese in the United States and Catholic see in the world, special commemoration of the Pope's birth was made during the day. In the United States the archbishops and bishops officiated at masses in their cathedrals, and called upon their priests to offer masses in every parish and as far as possible in every mission station for the intention of Pope Pius.

Throughout the country attention was drawn yesterday to Pope Pius' labors for social justice, and in sermons everywhere were cited quotations from his encyclical, "Reconstructing the Social Order."

"For more than 15 years Pius XI, from the apostolic chair of Peter, the chair of truth and the center of charity, has labored and taught as the supreme teacher and universal father," said Archbishop Cicognani. "The years of his pontificate enter into the 20 centuries of the history of the Catholic Church with a series of accomplishments of such importance as to stand comparison with those of the most illustrious pontiffs."

Before the large assembly in the shrine at Catholic University, Mgr. Corrigan declared the boy "born 80 years ago on the historic plains of Lombardy" had brought universal acclaim to his reign as supreme pontiff of the Catholic Church, because of his "daring to do," and his determination "to do always with God."

Pius, the university rector said, had done much to unify the forces of Catholicism throughout the world. He had, first of all, made use of all the aids of modern science, among which is the radio.

Pope Pius will deliver his birthday message to the world in a broadcast from the Vatican at noon (Eastern standard time) today.

More than a score of embassies and legations were represented by Ambassadors, Ministers or attaches at the rites. Several Senators and Representatives were also in attendance, including Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, accompanied by Mrs. Ashurst.

The mass was followed by a luncheon on the Catholic University campus attended by many of church dignitaries, university officials, faculty members and guests.

Gas Nearly Fatal To Colored Man

Gas used to fumigate the Fidelity Storage Building, at 1420 U street northwest, was nearly fatal to Edgar McKinley, colored, 37, of 1907 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday.

McKinley was one of several men who were working in the building with gas masks on when apparently his mask became damaged. He was taken from the building unconscious and given first aid by members of the Fre Rescue Squad. At Emergency Hospital, his condition was undetermined.

Pope Pius Pleased With Special Auto Presented on Eve of 80th Birthday

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, May 30 (AP). Pope Pius XI was given an automobile with gears and body designed especially for his comfort as a birthday present today. He will be 80 tomorrow.

The holy father, his face thinned by long illness, smiled brightly when he saw the car, stepped into it and sat down virtually without assistance.

"It is just what we wanted!" he exclaimed. "We probably will take the first drive in it on our eightieth birthday tomorrow."

Special gears enable the machine to negotiate the curves of the grounds of the pontifical villa or the Vatican garden without unduly disturbing the pontiff. Special doors permit him to enter the car without stepping up or stooping down.

D. C. Catholics Mark Feast of Corpus Christi

City Parishes Also Stage Ceremonies Honoring Blessed Mother.

Nearly 1,000 Catholics took part in outdoor festivities yesterday celebrating the Feast of Corpus Christi, and honoring the Blessed Mother.

More than 500 members of St. Anne's Church, sisters of Bon Secour Convent, and pupils of Immaculata Seminary formed a colorful procession which visited the church at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle streets, the convent and the school for services of benediction.

Outside altars had been erected at each of the places, located within a few blocks of each other, and the Rev. Maurice King, pastor of St. Anne's Church, conducted the benediction rites.

The Blessed Sacrament was carried in the procession, and was placed on each of the altars as services were conducted.

The Corpus Christi Feast is being celebrated this week by all Catholic parishes.

Final Processions.

Yesterday's May Queen processions at St. Matthew's, St. Vincent's and Holy Rosary churches, were the last of those to be conducted by parishes during the month. The parades, featured by a ceremony crowning statues of the Virgin Mother, were staged by parochial school children, and in all of them a May Queen, chosen from the school, presided over the exercises.

Annette Matalini was May queen at the 4 p. m. ceremonies at St. Matthew's Church. She led a procession of attendants and pupils to the statue of Mary. Benediction in the church followed.

At Holy Rosary Church, Third and F streets northwest, the queen was Jenny Beluso. Her attendants were Matilda Maisti, Florina Vagnoni, Stella Nicro, Rose Ferrara and Rose Perruso. Twenty-five pupils of the school were in the procession, which was followed by benediction conducted by the Rev. N. de Carlo, pastor.

Faybelle Dorsey was queen at St. Vincent's Church exercises at South Capitol and M streets. Parents joined the children in making the ceremony a community affair. The Rev. Joseph B. Glenn, S. S. J., pastor, presided over benediction following procession.

Highway Death Now Combated By Detectives

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Modern motoring has presented a new and baffling theme to crime detection—the battle against highway homicide.

Throughout the country there has appeared a new type of detective. His sole job is to investigate traffic accidents and track down highway offenders. He is highly trained and in most instances young.

He first appeared in the person of Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, youthful Evanston (Ill.) enforcement expert, a recent visitor to Washington. Under his auspices, accident-prevention bureaus have sprung up in all sections of the Nation.

The most recent one was in Detroit, automobile capital of America. Under the supervision of Lieut. Kreml and his aides, traffic detectives are carefully schooled before they are permitted to take over functions of the accident-prevention bureau.

Pass Rigid Tests.

The latest Detroit bureau is typical of the new school of dectection. Like its founder, members of the bureau are all young police officers. All have passed rigid physical and mental examinations.

Behind Kreml's accident prevention plan is the theory of intensive investigation and careful report on each accident—dented fender or fatality.

Nothing is passed up as "trivial." Even a scarred bumper, Kreml instructs, may prove of value in eliminating the cause of accidents and save future lives.

Before Kreml convinced Evanston authorities of the merit in his traffic investigation methods, police accident reports contained little information of value.

Now, traffic detectives undergo an intensive two-week training period before they are ready to operate. Then they are assigned either to cruising radio cars or motorcycles.

Photographs Taken.

When one of the new traffic detectives arrives at the scene of a crash, he immediately begins to take notes on all he sees. He has been instructed in courtesy, laws of evidence, photography and the physical operation of automobiles.

The investigators usually work in pairs. While one talks to the driver at an accident scene, the other takes photographs of the car or any bit of evidence that may be needed in court.

Each accident report is assembled on record cards to be turned into the central bureau. Experts are assigned to check these reports to determine what blame, if any, is to be established.

Kreml, during recent tours of his bureaus in nearly a score of cities, reports accident investigations are now being conducted by methods even more complete than are used in reported crimes of violence.

Fliers Celebrate In North Pole Hut

Moscow, May 30 (AP).—The Soviet North Pole expedition reported tonight contact had been established with I. P. Mazuruk, pilot who was forced down with supplies some 35 miles from the base camp.

Two pilots took off from the Polar base and established direct radio contact with Mazuruk, although thick fog prevented their locating him. When they returned to the base, they discovered Mazuruk also had communicated with expedition headquarters. The stranded pilot said he hoped to hop off either tonight or tomorrow for the camp.
